NAZI PLANES SOW MINES BY PARACHUTE

MINES DROPPED BY NAZI PLANES

LONDON, Nov. 23 (INS)—Mine-laying by airplane was revealed as a dramatic development in German war technique today in one of the most startling disclosures of the conflict to date.

German seaplanes, British officials said, flew low over the wide Thames river estuary during the night and dropped a new type of mine.

The mines, much smaller than those laid on the water by surface craft or submarines, drifted to the water in parachutes. They carried extraordinarily high explosives.

Eyewitnesses on both shores of the Thames declared the German craft, a large seaplane, swooped low over the water—some persons estimated as low as 50 feet—before loosing its deadly cargo.

The amazed onlookers reported other seaplanes were sighted in the same area about the same time.

The mines dropped were approximately the size of a football and, it was said, were sown indiscriminately from the planes, which were equipped with special bomb racks.

Despite the suddenness of the new mining technique, it was learned authoritatively that measures already are being taken to combat the Nazis' latest war move.

6 Ships Day's War Toll With Scores Missing

LONDON, Nov. 23 (INS)—A British destroyer, three freighters, and a French and a British trawler were listed as new victims of Germany's sea warfare today.

Latest sinking was the Geraldus, famed as a blockade-runner in the Spanish civil war. The 2494-ton British freighter, formerly the Candleston Castle, met her end when she went down off the east coast of England.

Whether a U-boat or mine blasted the ship was not immedi-

Winchell Says U. S. Man Nazi Prisoner In Hitler Bomb Plot

NEW YORK, Nov. 23 (INS)—Walter Winchell, writing in the New York Daily Mirror, declared today:

"Hey, Himmler! How about that 'Sigismund Payne Best' you Gestapo'd as the 'British intelligence officer' who planted the bomb in the beer hall?

"He is not Sigismund Payne Best. He is not a British intelligence officer and never was one. He is an American citizen, as we are informing the State Department.

"'He's my brother, Sigmund; just plain Sigmund,' said Broadway Mike Best last night.

"Mike, a well-known West Side sportsman and night club promoter, said his brother had left the States suddenly two years ago and had married a German girl in Prague, Czechoslovakia, now in the protectorate of Bohemia.

"'He never had anything to do with the British Secret Service,' said Mike.

"I asked Mike if he thought his brother had anything to do with the attempt on Hitler's life.

"'I hope so,' he said. 'I hope so.'"

War Diary

82d DAY

Great Britain learned today from her chancellor of the exchequer, Sir John Simon, that the war is costing her $23,580,000 a day while maritime losses, particularly off the mine-strewn east coast, continue to mount.

Newest naval casualty was the British destroyer Gipsy which struck a mine and was beached. Forty men were listed as missing. A Greek freighter, two British freighters and a French and British trawler were also added to the roll of at least 33 ships lost near Britain in the past week.

Sir John Simon mentioned "magnetic mines," which he attributed to Germany, as the cause of the sudden heavy maritime losses to the allies and neutrals.

London announced that German planes flying low last night over the Thames estuary had dropped by parachutes light mines containing a very high explosive.

Adolf Hitler conferred with his war chiefs at an annual reception for the Reich's air, sea and land fighting services.

A German communique declared four French planes had been downed on the western front where land fighting remained at a minimum.

A French communique reported six German planes were shot down in fighting yesterday. A seventh was shot down today near Francheconte after a lone raider had been driven off from Paris early this morning.

Gestapo Claims Nazis Outwit British Agents

BERLIN, Nov. 23 (AP)—"... Hearty greetings from your affectionate German opposition, German Gestapo. ..."

With those words, according to a DNB (official news agency) account published today, were ended 21 days of wireless contacts between the German secret police and British intelligence—21 days in which the German operatives stormed espionage secrets from their foe by posing as anti-Hitler revolutionists.

The whiplash disclosure of the real identity of the "revolutionists" was said by DNB to have been given only yesterday.

That was one day after the Gestapo had announced obtaining a confession from Georg Elser of Munich that he planted the Buergerbrau time bomb intended for Adolf Hitler. The announcement said Elser had British financial backing.

2 "BRITONS" HELD

In the same connection the Gestapo also had announced the arrest of two British Secret Service men, identified as Capt. Richard Henry Stevens, 42, chief of the European intelligence division, and Sigismund Payne Best, 54, an aide.

The two men were accused yesterday of direct connection with the Munich bomb plot from which Hitler escaped by only 11 minutes on Nov. 8. DND later distributed for publication an account of 21 days of coded wireless contacts between the Gestapo and the British intelligence.

Quoting "competent quarters," the news agency said that the contacts were ended at 10:10 a. m. yesterday with the following message:

"In the long run, conversation with self-important foolish persons is boresome. You will un-

NAZIS PUSH WAAR LIKE POLISH DRIVE

BERLIN, Nov. 23 (INS)—In a meeting of possibly y great significance, Chancellor Hitler today gave the commanderers of Germany's fighting forces, according to an official announcement, "directions that future warfare should be based on expeperiences in the Polish campaign."

These orders were given at a meeting behind closed doors in the chancelary, attended by scores of key men from all branches of the services.

Leaders at the chancellery were Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, No. 2 Nazi and chief of the air force; Col.-Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, commander-in-chief of the army; Grand Admiral Erich Raeder, commander-in-chief of the navy, and Col.-Gen. Wilhelm Keitel, chief of the armed forces high command.

Dowd Indicted in Bribery Of 4 More Jail Employes

More job-buyers, said to have paid $11,100 to John F. Dowd while he was sheriff of Suffolk County, were revealed today when the grand jury returned another indictment, charging Dowd in 17 additional counts with soliciting and accepting bribes.

Four county employes were mentioned in today's indictment as employes who were forced to pay for security in their jobs.

They were Daniel A. Whelton, veteran deputy sheriff and former mayor of Boston; John J. Casey, and George E. Hibbard, deputies, and Michael Pecardi, a courthouse janitor.

Whelton told the grand jury that he had paid Dowd $6900 from the deputies general fund in 11 separate installments.

LISTS $6900 PAID

He said he made one payment of $700, two payments of $600; eight payments of $500; two payments of $400 and one of $200 from the pool in which the deputies' fees were placed.

Casey said he paid $2500 to the then sheriff; Hibbard reported a $1000 gratuity and Pecardi $700.

To date the grand jury has charged Dowd collected nearly $30,000 on 49 counts and is still investigating with more than 50 county employes still to be heard.

After today's indictment the jury listened to Carlton Bell, telephone executive, as to long distance calls made by Dowd from a relative's home.

R. I. CLUE FOUND

Police meanwhile were making a country-wide hunt for Dowd and dashed to Providence on a tip that he was at a police station there under an alias.

An observant Providence officer compared Dowd's police circular picture with a man who had been arrested on an intoxication charge. He informed Lieut. John J. Walkins, from Dist. Atty. Foley's office that the resemblance was striking.

Walkins and Patrolman Joseph Cunningham rushed to the Rhode Island police station and viewed the prisoner. It was not Dowd, but the Providence visit uncovered the fact that Dowd had made frequent visits to that city.

$15,000 GEM LOOT IN BACK BAY SHOP

Burglars broke into the exclusive jewelry store of Guglielmo Cini in Boylston st., Back Bay, last night and made away with diamonds and other jewelry valued at between $15,000 and $20,000, it was reported to police of Back Bay station today.

Cini's store is on the second floor of a block facing the Public Garden. The burglars entered through the front door of the building after it had been closed at 6 p. m. yesterday.

They made their way directly to Cini's shop, according to police, ripped open the top of the huge safe containing the jewelry, and took the contents of the top compartment.

The loot included diamonds, other precious stones and gold ornaments, part of which belonged to Cini himself and part to owners who had sent them in for repair.

The shop caters to wealthy, socially-prominent clients.

Other valuables worth "several thousand dollars" in other compartments of the safe were undisturbed—probably, police said, because the burglars did not have time to ransack the vault.

The job must have taken considerable time, and burglars' tools, including saws and pinchbars, were left behind.

It was a "can opener" job, officers said, in which the metal of the safe was ripped open. It could not have been done by novices, they added.

The break was discovered by the janitor today.

Sergts. Frank I. Mullen and William H. Long and Special Officers Joseph Curren, George R. Bates and John J. McNicholas of Back Bay station were assigned to investigate.

Trapeze Girl Eager to Dare Death Again

"I go back!"

Last night, far up under the girders of the Boston Garden roof diminutive Henrietta Wallenda, 13 ("I'll be 20 in March"), collapsed on a platform 40 feet above the ground.

Today at her hotel she smiled demurely and insisted:

"This afternoon—I go back."

Miss Wallenda's fainting spell—the result of a cold—chilled 12,000 spectators who watched her, under the glare of a powerful spotlight . . . clad in a silken costume . . . fighting unconsciousness . . . fighting to keep from falling to the ground.

She was balancing on the shoulders of her brother-in-law, who was sitting on a chair balanced on a tight-rope, when she began to feel dizzy.

The man felt her begin to waver and talked to her till she was able to get from his shoulders to the comparative safety of the platform, where she collapsed.

A slip of a girl, with a cute manner of speech that comes from her German birth ("I don't pay any attention what they do over there now. When I am 21, I become an American"), Miss Wallenda petted her dog as she talked.

"Tillie" is the name of the dog—though he is a "gentleman puppy."

"I don't know how he ever got the name Tillie," Miss Wallenda smiled.

"But, no matter," she added, "I caught the cold from your New England weather. It was nothing. I go back!

"Next week we go to—some little town near here. Now, what is the name?"

"Dover?"

"No, not Dover. I know—Providence!"

Providence, here she comes!

Property Seized For Unpaid Taxes

More than 54,435 pieces of property in Massachusetts have been surrendered to cities and towns through failure of owners to pay taxes. The communities have thus lost $21,552,029 of taxable property, David W. Creelman, State director of the division of local taxation, declared yesterday in an address to the 50th annual meeting of the Massachusetts Assessors' Ass'n.

GIRL DIES IN QUINCY MYSTERY

Struck down by a hit-and-run automobile or tossed from a speeding car, Barbara Pelletier, 21, pretty Quincy waitress, was fatally injured today. She was found in Arnold st., near the intersection of South st., Quincy.

She died several hours after being taken to Quincy City Hospital. At first her identity was unknown, but police checked on a pawn ticket found in her clothes and went to a South Walnut st. home.

There they learned she had moved to Quincy from Houlton, Me.

A sister living in Houlton was notified as police and motor vehicle inspectors sought a clue to the automobile involved.

Residents of the district heard automobile brakes screech shortly before the girl's body was found.

Grouches Now Want Their Own Holiday

By Associated Press

The Grouch Club of America, Inc., a fun-born organization founded to preserve "our unsurpassed national sense of humor," today designated leap year's Feb. 29 as "national Grouch day," and suggested George Bernard Shaw was in line for recognition as "the international grouch."

A smile wreathing his lips in striking paradox to his position, Willard B. Rogers, the organization's portly president, declared that the Grouch Club was growing and would press Congress for national recognition of grouch day.

As for the British dramatist, Shaw,

"Well," said Rogers, puffing with relish on a fat cheroot, "he grouches about everything and doesn't know what he's grouching about, that type is incurable.

HAS PEEVE OF HIS OWN

"And our members have indicted a desire to designate Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes as national grouch. We're writing him to lend his influence to get grouch day through Congress."

Rogers has a pet peeve of his own—he and his secretary, Richard B. Walsh have 5000 or more letters to answer, he said, from "grouches" who are seeking membership in the club.

They came in response to inquiries issued by the organization in an effort to determine what Americans were grouching about.

"One woman wrote," Walsh asserted, "to find out if she could enroll her entire bridge club. Several men complained about feathers of women's hats.

"A husband and wife wanted us to settle a marital grouch—which one should get up in the morning to close the window."

Rogers found the club "just as a joke because a business executive with whom we lunch was always grouching about the economic situation despite the fact he's making more money than he ever did before and his business is expanding.

"Why he's peeved even about paying taxes. What would he do if he had no income to pay taxes on?"

Hub License Board Bars Drinking Debs

Gay young debutantes whose revels in exclusive Boston night clubs have set the pace for entertainment in less glamorous but equally youthful circles today became the target of a police drive against drinking by minors.

A warning to the young set to either switch to milk or stick to the fireside was sounded by the Boston Licensing Board as the opening gun in the drive against night spots catering to boys and girls not yet 21 years old.

"We have been receiving too many complaints of boys and girls being drunk, and this board is going to deal most severely with any of our licensed establishments which are convicted of selling liquor to minors," declared Chairman Mary E. Driscoll with the expressed agreement of the other members, Edward M. Richardson and Edwin D. Gallagher.

The board's attention was shifted to Dorchester during the public hearing when Edward Robinson, secretary of the Benevolent Fraternity of Unitarian Churches, charged that section was becoming the alcoholic "dumping ground" for the city.

Opposing a petition for transfer by the State St. Beverage, Inc., from State st., to Dorchester ave., Robinson protested that Dorchester "already has more liquor establishments per square mile than any other section of the city."

"When Dorchester was annexed to Boston, it had no saloons, no funded debts, no inmates in asylums," said Robinson, one of Dorchester's oldest residents.

"I was born and live in Dorchester, like my ancestors for 300 years before me.

"Why make it now the 'dumping ground' of the city?" he asked.

The petition was also opposed by Rep. Thomas F. Coyne, who told the board that the district is already "infested" with liquor stores, and by representatives of religious and business groups. The case was taken under advisement.

SEEK TRAIN VICTIM'S NAME THROUGH CHILD'S PICTURE

A torn photograph of a small girl may help police learn the identity of a well-dressed man who was crushed to death beneath the wheels of a Boston Elevated train in Charlestown today.

The picture, worn and faded, apparently from having been carried many months, was found tucked in the victim's pocketbook after his body had been removed from the Elevated structure above Main st., near Thompson sq.

How the man happened to be walking along the trestle, where signs order persons to stay away because of the dangerous third rail, is a mystery to police.

The man, when struck, was a block away from the Thompson sq. station. All three cars of the train passed over his body.

Power was shut off and firemen and police clambered to the gruesome scene, while 60 passengers on the train waited in the darkness, nervously.

The Rev. Frederick J. Allchin, pastor of St. Mary's Church, walked down the rails from the station to administer the last rites of the Catholic Church.

Elevated trains were delayed and traffic on Main st. blocked while workers tried to extricate the body. Finally, the train was sent ahead to Sullivan sq. and the body removed to Northern Mortuary.

Police issued the following description of the victim and his clothing, in addition to the child's photograph:

Five feet, eight inches in height, 150 pounds, smooth face, brown hair, gray-blue eyes, ship and anchor tattoo on right forearm with words "Sailor's grave."

Twin Killed As Other Slips Truck Brake

One of the most tragic automobile fatlities ever reported in Boston occurred today when a heavy oil truck crushed Gordon Bruce Durning, 3, under its wheels after his twin brother, Allan R., Jr., released the brakes.

The father, Allan R. Durning of Forest Hills st., Jamaica Plain, was making an oil delivery at a home in Peter Parley rd., Jamaica Plain. He left the three-year-old twins sitting in the truck.

He came whistling out to his truck a few minutes later to find one child dead, and his other son incoherent from grief as he tried to explain.

In some manner he had released the brakes and the truck had rolled over his brother, who was playing in front of it.

The grief-stricken father and child were taken home in a police cruising car.

WAIT TESTIMONY OF KUHN'S 'GOLDEN ANGEL' AT TRIAL

NEW YORK, Nov. 23 (AP)—The proceedings in Fritz Kuhn's larceny trial were pointed sharply today toward the witness stand appearance of Mrs. Florence Camp, one time "golden angel" of the Bundfuehrer's transcontinental correspondence but now considerably fallen from his grace.

"I thought Mrs. Camp was a very fine lady, but I found out she isn't," Kuhn remorsefully admitted yesterday, after the prosecution had read into the records three of Kuhn's letters to her studded with protestations of undying love.

That renunciation of the blonde divorcee capped a double recantation by the red-faced bundfuehrer: An admission that he had lied to Mrs. Camp in 1938 by telling her he had divorced his wife in 1934 (he's still married), and an admission that he lied when he testified, yesterday morning, that he never had told Mrs. Camp he was divorced.

The state has announced Mrs. Camp will be called, as a rebuttal witness against Kuhn, who is accused of stealing money from his German-American bund.

SQUIRMS IN SEAT

Through most of the day's session, he had squirmed and perspired under cross-examination but stuck wearily to the contention that his relationship with Mrs. Camp was "very, very friendly" and nothing more. This despite a note, written on shipboard in February, 1938, in which he begged her to "become my beloved wife." He said that was "only in fun."

Here was the note, in part, the jury heard read:

"My most beloved darling Florence—I thanking you so much for your letters, I hardly can tell you how much they helped me. So you gained 15 lbs.—do I love that? Yes, sweetheart, I like it; of course it makes no difference to me how heavy you are and how you look—I love you and that is all.

"I love you so much—so much my darling. You're my soul—my wife and my everything—I thank you so much for your letters. I am really so glad that you keep your promises so wonderful and writing me every day—I am so thankful for it and it really helps me a great lot—and know my dearest Florence let me thank you again and again for your wonderful birthday present.

LOVE PLEDGE

"You know that separation gets me down—you know we belong together and if we are together, you know I will never let you alone for one day. I love you more than my one life. I forgot to tell you I got a letter from my parents in Munich and they like you very much as a daughter-in-law. Again I thank you for everything—I kiss you until you tell me to stop—I kiss your hands and everything.

"You my golden angel, take good care of yourself until I take care of you. All my love and kisses—Fritz."

Flushed, confused and angry, Kuhn admitted that he lied on the witness stand.

"You lied this morning," Prosecutor McCarthy shouted at the witness in developing for the jury the relationship between Kuhn and blonde Mrs. Camp.

"That's right," admitted Kuhn. "Why?" he was asked.

"Because I thought she was a lady. Now I do not think so."

The letters were addressed to Mrs. Camp at Los Angeles.

Kuhn admitted using the names Karsten, Keller and Larson but denied that he ever sent $50 to Mrs. Virginia Cogswell, one-time "Miss America," under the name Frank Carson.

The trial resumes tomorrow.

Harvard Boys Show Bookie 'Winning' Way

A Harvard sq. bookie is a sadder, but perhaps a wiser man today.

In fact, he may also be a little bit tender in certain spots as the result of a "conference" with a score of students from whom he already had collected several hundred dollars in bets on the outcome of the Harvard-Yale football game next Saturday.

The boys became suspicious after receiving odds of 6½ to 5 on the game and were being told to collect their winnings, if any, at a downtown restaurant.

Several of the students inveigled the bookie to a Mt. Auburn st. establishment for questioning. They determined he was not quite honest in his dealings, took their money back and "censured" him on the morals of trying to steal from students.

HUNTING 'VICTIM' SLAIN

TAMWORTH, N. H., Nov. 23—A $100 reward was posted today by authorities as clues piled up indicating the slaying of Chester Whiting, 37, of this town, at first thought a hunting casualty, was actually the victim of premeditated murder.

Whiting's body was found in a thicket near a brook with a rifle slug imbedded in his back. Police, estimating the range at not more than 40 yards, became suspicious when no exploded cartridge was found in the vicinity.

Whiting, a caretaker for several summer estates, had set out to tend traps along the brook. His wife appealed for aid when he failed to return at midnight, and a posse discovered the body five hours later.

The short distance at which the fatal blast was fired, together with other circumstances, prompted authorities to order the case left open for further investigation.

One Killed, 3 Hurt In Hunting Toll

One death, critical injuries to another man, and less serious gun wounds to two other persons was the toll today of hunting accidents in Maine and Vermont.

Mistaken by a sportsman stalking deer, Andrew Olson, 70, of Stockholm, Me., was killed in nearby Caribou by a rifle bullet which ripped through the arm of his wife. She was not critically wounded.

In Saco, Alfred B. Ouellette, 40, was wounded, perhaps fatally, when his companion's rifle discharged accidentally and the slug struck him in the head. His name was placed on the danger list at Buxton Hollis Hospital in Barmills.

Vermont's first casualty befell Gilbert L. Welch, who was shot through the right hand by an unknown hunter in Sudbury.

URGES MORE CASH FOR AGED

Kenneth I. Taylor, secretary-treasurer of the Massachusetts State Federation of Labor, appealed to members of the Legislature today to call a special session in January for the purpose of increasing old age assistance benefits by taking advantg of funds made available by Congress.

In a letter to the legislators, Taylor pointed out that Congress had adopted substantial amendments to the Social Security Act during its recent session, too late for consideration by the regular session of the Legislature here.

"One of the changes, provides that the federal government will match state funds for old age assistance in monthly payments up to $30 instead of $15," he said.

An amendment to the state statue was necessary, Taylor said, if old age assistance recipients were to benefit by the increased amount made available by Congress.

Through such action, the maximum payments would be increased from $30 to $40 a month, he added.

Hold CCC Man For Sanity Test

WEST TOWNSEND, Nov. 23 (AP)—A man hunt of more than five hours in whicha posse sought a deranged rifleman who had threatened CCC enrollees at the West Townsend camp, ended today when state and town police arrested Lieut. Alfred J. Lloyd, 35, of this town and disarmed him.

He was committed to the Worcester State Hospital for 10 days' observation after examination by Dr. Richard Ely of Townsend.

Lloyd, up to a few days ago lieutenant in charge of the CCC barracks, created a panic last night when he appeared in the mess hall, brandished a rifle, and sent a dozen of the campers in flight out of the quarters.

Woman Found Hurt in Ravine

A 45-year-old Newton woman lay helpless with a broken leg in a frozen, snow-covered ravine near Leverett Pond parkway in Brookline for almost hours today before her moans attracted attention.

Mrs. Julia Tremble of Boyd st., the victim, told Brookline and Boston officers that she had tried to take a short cut through the park near the Brookline-Boston line shortly after midnight, lost her way, and fell into the ravine.

Shortly after 2 p. m. an unidentified pedestrian heard her cries and called police. She was taken to Peter Bent Brigham hospital.

RULES AID PARENTS, PUPILS

Walter E. Downey, state commissioner of education, offered nine rules of advice to children and 11 for parents in a talk before members of the Lawrence Rotary Club today.

He emphasized to pupils the opportunity offered by schools, and urged parents to "have confidence" in their children.

Here are his conduct rules for pupils:

1—School is your great opportunity. Do not neglect it.

2—Fear to b emediocre. Have the courage to be excellent.

3—Hard work will pay dividends. Indifferent effort is like an unsound bank—it is facing bankruptcy.

4—You do not need money to be a success. If you are honest, thorough, work hard, have some character, you are wealthy.

5—Study habits are developed like muscles—not all at once, but gradually. Will power and work will develop these habits.

6—It is better to be a thinker than a taker. Develop the power of thought by thinking, not by talking. Power of expression comes after thinking, not before.

7—Don't blame other for your own mistakes. Blame yourself. We all make mistakes. If you make a mistake, do not get discouraged. Brace up and live it down. Decide not to make the same mistake again.

8—Be clean in every way, in thoughts, appearance and action.

9—Above all, be a person of character. Character and religion are necessary for real success in life.

Here is his advice to parents:

1—Parents should have the complete confidence of their children.

2—Give them all the affection possible, always.

3—Promote will power, not willfulness.

4—Discipline begins in the cradle. It is difficult to begin at the age of 15 or 16. It must be started long before.

5—Watch and assist children during their teens. They need the help and advice of their parents.

6—athers should give a fair share of their time to their boys and girls.

7—Parents should watch the spiritual life of their children.

8—Parents should remember that imitation is a strong native trait. Actions speak louder than words.

9—The child should not be dominated. He should be allowed to develop naturally under guidance.

10—It is important that fathers and mothers agree in training their children. There should be a consistent plan.

11—I have every confidence in modern youth. They live in a complex age, exposed to many distractions, and I feel they compare more than favorably with any past generation.

The future of America depends upon the proper education and upbringing of the youth of today.

CAROL'S CABINET QUITS

BUCHAREST, Nov. 23 (AP)—The Rumanian government resigned today after a breakdown of trade negotiations in which Germany brought pressure to obtain more oil and foodstuffs from Rumania at a lower cost.

Premier Constantine Argetoianu handed the cabinet's resignation to King Carol, who asked him to attempt to form a new government. Argetoianu formed the cabinet Sept. 28.

Carol was expected to call a meeting of the crown council to consider the crisis and any emergency steps to be taken. Informed persons said German pressure caused a cabinet split, some members wanting to yield to demands of the Reich while others held out.

Parliament Sits Again on Nov. 28

LONDON, Nov. 23 (AP)—King George VI prorogued Parliament today.

A new session is scheduled to open Nov. 28 with a full dress debate on all aspects of the war.

The King's statement ending the present session declared the war with Germany was being fought to preserve the birthright of liberty.

He called the invasion of Poland "a challenge which we could not have declined without dishonor to ourselves and without peril to the cause of freedom and the progress of mankind."

The King's statement, read to the members, said that despite efforts of Britain to preserve peace, "Germany, in violation of her solemn undertakings, wantonly invaded Poland."

Of Britain's aims he said:

"We seek no material gain. Liberty and free institutions are our birthright, which we, like our forefathers, are resolved to preserve."

SEES OWN HEART IN ACTION

By STEPHEN J. McDONOUGH
Associated Press Science Writer

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 23 (AP)—Few persons except highly trained surgeons and nurses have ever watched a human heart at work. But today I watched the action of my own heart more accurately than if it had been laid out on an operating table.

Dr. Graham Asher of the University of Kansas medical school, Kansas City, Kan., was demonstrating to members of the Southern Medical Association his "lag screen electrocardiograph," a machine for diagnosing heart trouble, which brought him first award in the association's scientific exhibit. I became one of his subjects for demonstration.

The hookup looked as though I had been prepared for the electric chair, but instead of electricity being poured into me, my heart was pumping out electrical impulses to a dancing needle-point of light which was recorded on a moving strip of fluorescent film.

A small metal electrode was strapped to each wrist and to the left ankle. The current flowing from the heart is so small as to be almost undetectable, but the electrocardiograph multiplies it from 800 to 1000 times through a series of vacuum tubes to actuate the beam of light.

The machine itself is not new, but the "lag screen" device which keeps the record of the light visible for 5 seconds or more is the newest improvement in making diagnosis of early heart disease a simple procedure.

With the electrodes on and the machine in action the light began to do a regular, even dance, leaving a tracing which looked like a chart of the rises and slumps of the stock market.

"You have a slight dip in the 'T' curve just before the expansion beat of the heart, indicating that you are a little overweight," Dr. Asher pointed out as the moving strip of film passed along.

Salvation Army To Give Dinners

The Salvation Army announced today it will continue, this year, its custom of giving scores of homeless men an old-fashioned Thanksgiving Dinner at the Men's Social Service on Vernon st., Roxbury, next Thursday at noon. It was also announced that the final report meeting of the campaign organization to collect $195,000 for charity in Greater Boston will be held tomorrow noon at the Chamber of Commerce.

COLLEGE FLIERS AT AIRPORTS

College students being trained to become airplane pilots under the government's "civilian training program" moved into their schedules at the East Boston airport today as army air corps officers, interested in finding combat pilots, prepared to visit local colleges.

The civilian training program is not connected with the army air corps schedule.

E. W. Wiggins Airways has the local civilian training right, and under the direction of General Manager Ben Follett and Charles Scott, 170 students are taking lessons at East Boston and Norwood airports.

Students from Harvard, M. I. T., Northeastern, Tufts, Boston College and Middlesex are included. All must have private pilot licenses by June 1.

There is one instructor to every 10 students, and the youths get half-hour lessons till they have 12 hours, then hour lessons.

Meantime, a board of army officers will visit Boston College Nov. 22-24, Harvard University Nov. 27-29, and Holy Cross Dec. 5-7, it was announced today by Maj.-Gen. James A. Woodruff.

The board, including Capt. Emmett O'Donnell, Jr., Lieut. Campbell H. Gould and Capt. Charles H. Morhouse of the medical corps, all attached to the air corps, will explain to seniors the qualifications needed for army flying cadets. Capt. Morhouse will give physical examinations.

Hitler Wedded, London Report

LONDON, Nov. 23 (INS)—Adolf Hitler, according to a tale in the "Londoner's Diary" column of the Evening Standard, has a bride—but the German chancellor is waiting until the war is over to cry "surprise!"

The column quoted a German friend of Hitler's from Switzerland as saying Der Fuehrer married Fraulein Eva Rao, an assistant to Hitler's old friend, the photographer, August Hoffman.

"I understand that Frau Hitler is a surprise for the German people," the columnist wrote.

"The news will not be broken until the war is over."

KENNEDY HOME FOR YULETIDE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23 (INS)—Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles revealed today that Joseph P. Kennedy, United States ambassador to Great Britain, would return to the United States for a ten day vacation during the Christmas season.

Welles said Kennedy was not summoned home, and will return to his London post after his leave has expired. Naturally, he is expected to report at the department, probably at the White House also.

Disclosure that Kennedy would make a trip to the United States followed formal announcement that Joseph E. Davies, ambassador to Belgium, had been called home for conferences about projected changes in the U. S.-Belgium trade treaty.

Welles categorically denied published reports that Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Jr., ambassador to Poland, now stationed at Angers, France, would come to the United States in the near future, or that Ambassador to France William C. Bullitt would return. He said Biddle and Bullitt would spend the holidays in Paris.

LONDON, Nov. 23 (AP)—United States Ambassador Joseph E. Kennedy, addressing "fellow exiles" at the annual Thanksgiving meeting of the American Society, said today:

"The war we all dreaded has come. All we can do is face the future with fortitude, with faith and with thankfulness for the blessings we still enjoy."

Duke and Wally At U. S. Service

PARIS, Nov. 23 (AP)—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor attended Thanksgiving services today at the American Church of Paris. The duke who has the rank of major-general in the British army, was in uniform.

A special Thanksgiving Day mass was celebrated at the Madeleine, fashionable Parish church.

Not a six but an EIGHT for $895 and up delivered at Flint, Mich. Transportation based on rail rates, state and local taxes (if any), optional equipment and accessories—extra. Prices subject to change without notice.

LIFT the bonnet of a 1940 Buick and you'll see a hoodful of power plant whose very dimensions reveal the vast reserve of energy it puts at your command.

But just start this over-size giant—stir this sleeping brute into action, and you find that only the blur of the fan blades betrays its readiness to get up and go!

For you're looking at an engine balanced within limits eight to sixteen times closer than ordinary practice permits.

So precise is Buick's exclusive method of micropoise-balancing after assembly that a misplaced dime's weight on the flywheel rim is enough to reject any engine until that condition has been corrected.

On that score alone this hundred-plus horsepower straight-eight qualifies as the world's one-and-only of its kind.

But in addition to that it's a valve-in-head engine, 10% more efficient, size for size—and it's a Dynaflash valve-in-head, which means it gets more good out of every drop of gas!

The car this great eight powers has plenty else to lay claim to your attention—smart new styling, BuiCoil Springing's "full float" comfort, "finger flick" Handishift transmission, seats in some models that are next thing to five feet wide.

But even if you overlook them and all the rest of its 72 new features—your best buy's still Buick on its power plant alone.

There's not a quiver in a hoodful of ready-to-ramble energy—and nobody will be more pleased to prove it than your nearest Buick dealer!

"Best buy's Buick!"

U.S. Navy Lists 39 Drifting Mines

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23 (AP)—A Navy announcement that 39 drifting mines have been sighted in the North Sea in the last two days deepened the convictions of some maritime experts today that they had been set adrift to make British waters a no-man's area for all shipping.

Stormy weather often has wrested mines from their moorings, but seldom in such clusters indicated by the incomplete reports broadcast by the Navy's hydrographic office. Most of the reports came from the U. S. S. Trenton.

Treaties prescribe automatic devices to assure that mines accidentally set adrift will be rendered harmless within an hour, but those afloat in the North sea have accounted for most of the 16 ships sunk or damaged in the last five days.

DOUBT NEW "TERROR MINE"

The latest development in the European sea warfare suggested these tentative conclusions to qualified experts:

1—Recent heavy shipping losses are due to the numbers of the mines and their free drift rather than to the perfection of revolutionary new undersea weapons.

2—Virtually all the mines have been laid by submarines built for the purpose.

3—Setting them adrift has raised difficulties calculated to tax British and French means of keeping open vital commerce lanes.

4—The Allied blockade and the German fight to create a counter blockade has not differed basically from the 1914-18 pattern.

In the World War Germany laid 43,636 mines, by official count. Ninety per cent were put out by mine-laying submarines, a special type that originated in the earlier struggle.

GERMANS IGNORED PACT

On the first day of the 1914-18 war, a German ship placed the first of the deadly weapons, each bearing about 300 pounds of TNT or similar explosive, in the open sea rather than near a coast as prescribed by the Hague 1907 convention.

To allied protests, Germany replied that the treaty was not binding as Russia had not formally ratified it.

In later years German mines were set adrift near the approaches to the French harbors used by American transports.

The early German mines were definitely superior until the British developed their improved H2 weapon. These were mines exploded only by actual contact. The United States Navy introduced the Mark VI mine with antennae 35 feet long, which exploded on contact with a ship's hull. These were used in the North Sea mine barrage, and to sweep them up after the war required a year of dangerous work.

Subsequent developments have been closely guarded, but there have been no strong hints of revolutionary new undersea weapons.

SWEEPING UP MINES

Ordnance specialists appear convinced that magnetic mines which would be attracted by the metal of a ship's hull are impractical. They were discarded in 1918 by an American official board headed by the late Thomas A. Edison, which noted the quick loss of magnetic power with distance.

At the armistice, Britain had 726 vessels of all types engaged in the perilous task of sweeping the English coast for 1000 miles daily. The sweepers were blown up at the rate of about one a week during the entire war, but the rate of loss has been reduced from one ship for every two mines to one ship for every 80 mines destroyed.

Of 23,873 mines listed as destroyed, more than half were adrift.

Submarine mines accounted altogether for a loss of 803 British ships out of 3154 British vessels of all sizes and types that went down.

SPECIAL ALL WEEK 39c DOZEN LARGE SIZE
One hundred local poultry farms, nestled in New England's arms, sends us daily a thousand kegs of extra-buxom, fresh brown eggs. The hens that lay them, valued highly, live the pampered life of Riley. They do not have to scratch for food, but dine—this Babylonian brood—on the equivalent of steak, caviar, ice cream and cake. You'd think from these expensive calories, that roosters drew enormous salaries. The eggs laid in this feathered harem are not selected harum-scarum, but have to pass a test demanding details on their social standing; and every egg is asked to state its bust measure and its weight. Each egg adjudged O.K. for YOU must have a very high I.Q. If it rates high, the morsel can expect to reach your frying pan.

derstand if we break off. Hearty greetings from your affectionate German opposition, German Gestapo."

This grimly humorous finale to the Gestapo's cat-and-mouse game was said to have been as a matter of routine by the British radio operators who got in the last word by acknowledging receipt of the farewell message, DNB said:

"Since the exposure of the English espionage action, despite the German announcement at this time, apparently it still was unknown to the English secret service wireless station. Both English operators, Inman and Walsh, even acknowledged this final message."

The Gestapo had asserted the British agents operated from a headquarters at The Hague, but the location of the wireless station was not specified.

According to the Gestapo, the two British agents were arrested Nov. 9 when they attempted to enter Germany from the Netherlands.

(The British foreign office has denied that any British agent knew of any German "described as having placed a bomb in the Munich cellar" and called the arrest of two British subjects at Venloo a kidnaping.

(Reports at the time of the Venloo affair said shots were fired and that several persons were carried into Germany. These were known to include a Hague garage owner.)

The Gestapo said Stevens was a native of Athens, a former student at Heidelberg University and a member of the Indian secret service before becoming chief of the European branch of the British intelligence.

The German police said Best had been an intelligence officer for the British general staff in the World War.

(He had married a Netherlands subject and had lived at The Hague since 1916 when he entered the Netherlands as an officer and was interned. He represented a British business firm and was well known in diplomatic circles.)

Strasser Lays Hitler Bomb to Hess, Himmler

PARIS, Nov. 23 (INS)—Striking back at his accusers, Otto Strasser, exiled former Nazi leader whom German police called "spiritual author" of the Munich bomb plot against Hitler, today charged Nazi chieftains with plotting the beer hall blast of Nov. 8.

"Last night I received definite proof that Hess and Himmler planned the Munich affair, including the deaths of their flunkies," he said. "This was necessary to build up the campaign of hatred against England."

Rudolph Hess is deputy Nazi leader and Heinrich Himmler is head of the German secret police. Eight Nazis were killed in the Munich explosion a few minutes after Hitler left a reunion in the beer cellar.

ctely clear. All 26 members of her crew were saved.

Involving the probable death of 16, another sinking was revealed when 11 survivors from the British steamer Darino, 1349 tons, were landed on the east coast four days after a German submarine sent the ship down.

OTHERS FEARED DEAD

The U-boat which destroyed the Darino Sunday took the 11 men aboard, holding them for three days, then transferred them to an unidentified Italian ship, which carried them to England. It was assumed that the missing sailors either were killed by the torpedo or were drowned.

A submarine sank the 287-ton British trawler Sulby off the Scottish coast, and a mine sent the Greek merchantman Elena R, 4576 tons, to the bottom off the southern coast of England.

Seven members of the crew of the Sulby were rescued. The remaining five are missing. All 24 members of the Elena R's crew were saved.

11 FRENCHMEN MISSING

Eleven of the 12 men of the crew of the French fishing trawler Saint Clair B 922 were feared lost today when she struck a mine in the English channel.

The engineer was found clinging to a piece of wreckage after several hours in the water and was taken to Boulogne by a British steamer

Today's losses brought to 23 the number of vessels sunk in British waters since Saturday.

Under the former name, the Geraldus carried goods to the losing leftist side in the Spanish civil war, running past a blockade in which German and Italian warships, as well as Fascist Spanish boats, participated.

The British admiralty announced last night that the new destroyer Gypsy had been beached after striking a mine.

Forty of her men were missing and 21 injured. Built in 1936, she nominally carries 145 officers and men.

The new shipping losses added materially to the toll of the war which Great Britain estimates is costing her $23,580,000 a day.

England Sends Home 3000 Spain Refugees

LONDON, Nov. 23 (AP)—The government informed the House of Lords today that 3000 Basque refugee children brought to England during the Spanish Civil War had been returned.

Half of the 1000 remaining are awaiting transportation. The others will stay in England because they have no homes.

FIRING SQUAD AT DAWN

by PAUL WHELTON

IN all the enthralling annals of the World War, there are few stories more dramatic, and at the same time more tragic, than that of Joseph Zilliox, an Alsatian conscripted into the German Army but fired with a determination to serve his native France.

Torn from his bride of less than a year, forced into the fighting on the wrong side, and wounded, Zilliox deserted spectacularly more than two years after the war's start.

JOSEPH ZILLIOX
Dies for France

Keenly disappointed when, because of suspicion, the French and Belgian armies refused to enlist him, Zilliox became a spy, was captured, again escaped—and finally was recaptured and executed, never having seen or heard from his bride in the nearby three years since their unhappy parting.

Through all this—and little wonder at it—the courageous man had a strange premonition of the ultimate disaster. Out of the many letters he wrote his bride, who was in Paris, she received but one.

Of the many frantic letters she wrote him, he received none at all, the letters apparently having been destroyed by censors. In the only letter she received from him, written when he was a spy, he said:

"My life from now on is for my dear France, and perhaps I shall never see you again. I tried every possible means to see you and when, finally, I thought I was near my goal, I was farthest from it.

"At present there is no happiness for me except in the turmoil of events, when I can say each moment: 'My life henceforth is for France.'

"I cannot express here why I love France so much, and hate Germany so intensely. Today, I hate Germany more than I love my life.

"My dear A, this is perhaps the last time I shall be writing to you. Send me a reply so that I can receive it while still alive, if God so wills it.

"I must stop, for my heart bursts when I think of my past life. Greet and embrace everyone for me. My sincerest kisses for the last time."

Joseph Zilliox, like thousands of other Alsatians conscripted into the Imperial German Army, had the unhappy experience of facing the French at Verdun—of pointing and firing his gun at blood relations.

Born June 25, 1888, in the small village of Offendorf, he had imprudently tarried there after sending his young bride, an Alsatian girl, to Paris after the outbreak of war. His brothers had gone with her, but Joseph was seized by the Germans and impressed.

ON Nov. 6, 1914, he was wounded at Verdun and was invalided for six months. Returning then to the German depot at Trier he was detailed for duty at Liege because of his knowledge of barges. The Zilliox family were rivermen and with their own barges had navigated the canals and rivers of Alsace, Belgium and France.

Stationed on the Meuse, at Renory, which is close to Liege, Zilliox became part of the Hafenamt, or Port Administration, in charge of hauling gravel for concrete used in trench construction.

Here the young Alsatian laborer made friends with the barge and tug crews and the people of the countryside and dreamed of escape—but it was Dec. 5, 1916, before he was ready to put a plan into effect.

For some time he and a friend of pre-war days, Jules Hentjens, captain of the tugboat Atlas, had been scheming to get across the border into Holland and they had involved the spectacular plan to crash the tug through the boom stretched across the Meuse as a barricade at the border.

And while they were at it (they considered) why not take with them a band of refugees, men eager to become Belgian soldiers but trapped in Belgium when the German horde had descended.

This involved a larger tugboat and they picked out the Anna for the attempt, a craft crewed by three German soldiers, the captain, engineer and a boat hand.

However, at the last moment, Hentjens was forced to pull out of the scheme, as his wife was about to have a baby and she did not wish him to leave her.

On the night of Dec. 4th, Zilliox, under pretense that it was his birthday, gave a party to the crew of the tugboat and by 3 a. m. the trio of Germans were fairly drunk when they staggered on board. For good measure Zilliox produced another bottle and this time the liquor was drugged. The Germans slipped into deep slumber.

In the darkness before that dawn some 50 refugees, assembled by an organization in Liege, and waiting concealed in an inn since 6 o'clock the previous night, were smuggled into the coal bunkers of the tug.

Three of the Belgians, however, donned the uniforms of the Germans, and at 5:30 a. m. Zilliox and his motley crew were endeavoring vainly to get up steam in the unfamiliar boilers when the befuddled captain walked out. He was promptly slugged by Zilliox and went back to sleep again, this time in the bunkers with his mates and under guard.

But the refugees still had difficulty about the steam, and finally it was necessary to slap the German engineer into wakefulness and force him to direct the operations. River operations began daily at 6 a. m.

It was five minutes past that hour when the lines finally were cast off and the great adventure started, with Zilliox on deck, a familiar figure to the German sentries, and with his three pseudo German bargemen moving around conspicuously.

In the engine room the refugees comprising the "black gang" shoveled like mad to keep full steam up, the engineer having been sent to the bunkers.

QUICKLY the lights of the German frontier post came toward them, and the mouth of the Berwinne, a small tributary of the Meuse, was passed. Zilliox rang for full speed ahead and the amateurs in the hotroom gave her everything they had.

With a grinding impact the bow of the tug lurched up in the air, clearing the river surface—then dropped again as the heavy boom parted. Zilliox threw his cap in the air. They were through the barrier. But then horror swept over him. The tugboat's rudder, apparently damaged by that terrific smash, refused to function.

Sickeningly the tugboat nosed into the mud of the bank 30 yards on the German side of the Dutch frontier. But all was not lost yet! With amazement the German frontier guards had watched the performance of the tug, but the German uniforms on the deck had dispelled any suspicion that this was anything but an accident.

A searchlight swept now upon the scene. It showed men, many men, leaping overboard and racing for the border. Only then did the Germans begin shooting, but from 200 yards away. The escape had been effected.

The rage of the German commander in the Liege area was magnificent. An inquiry was started. Houses were searched, inhabitants were grilled regarding the refugees.

Capt. Hentjens continued placidly to pilot his tugboat until he heard that his name was being mentioned in connection with the plot. So the captain quietly passed word to the same refugee organization and said good-bye to his young wife, who now was insisting that he flee.

In the dawn of Jan. 3, 1917, the doughty Hentjens, who was a Belgian, headed his Atlas down river, with 100 refugees hidden below. Straight for the barrier he drove but this time the sentries were not deceived.

A murderous fire raked the craft, but there was nobody on deck. In the pilot house, Hentjens was secure behind some armor plating he had rigged.

Again the boom was crashed through—and if the commander had been furious before, he was probably speechless at this second coup of its kind within a month.

From the time of his desertion and escape until early February, Zilliox attempted vainly to enlist either in the French or Belgian army, although he could have remained in Holland and in safety for the rest of the war.

Politely, even smilingly, he was turned down. They told him with regret that there had been so many instances of German spies posing as Alsatians who deserted the German army that an inexorable order had been issued forbidding further enlistment of men claiming to be Alsatian deserters.

He got work as a valet in the Hotel Coomans at Rotterdam, where the indignant Hentjens promised to speak for him as soon as he got to France, for where he was leaving.

HOWEVER, a week later Hentjens popped back to Holland. In England he had been persuaded to join the British Secret Service and organize a spy ring in and around Liege.

With joy Zilliox saw this as a way opened to him to serve France. He would return to Belgium as a spy—he who had endeavored so hard and so long to get out of the country.

Two other volunteers were found, two Belgians, one Henrot and one Lecocq. They started back for Liege, Zilliox having divested himself of the black beard he had worn in Liege and having donned spectacles and dyed his hair red.

Henrot journeyed alone and went by way of the electric wire across the border. Zilliox and Lecocq went together, this division being worked out to ensure the possibility of at least one of the men reaching their destination.

A woman smuggler helped Zilliox and Lecocq pass the frontier between Holland and Belgium.

By way of Aachen they eventually crossed the German-Belgian frontier at Welkenraedt, a roundabout route, but on account of Zilliox's knowledge of German it was less dangerous than passing through the heavily-charged wire.

Within 24 hours of his arrival in Liege, on Feb. 25, 1917, Zilliox had established a train-watching post, observing troop train movements on the Liege-Herbesthal-Aachen line.

Through Assistant Chief Lejeune of the Belgian police, whose son-in-law was one of the refugees taken over the border by Zilliox in the tugboat flight, the new spy was furnished with a false identity card under the name of van Hoven.

For three weeks, Zilliox, Lecocq and Henrot conducted espionage activities in the area, and then came a day when their courier failed to arrive to pick up reports.

After several days of this, Zilliox determined to return to Holland and find out what was the matter. Agreeable as always, despite the danger, he consented when Lejeune asked that he smuggle three young Belgians across with him.

In the dark of early evening Zilliox and his trio sought out the house of a woman smuggler near the wired border. To the leader's dismay she was out. On the road he met another woman, and imprudently inquired for the smuggler. She pointed out another house a short distance away.

Collecting his refugees, Zilliox went to this house—and walked into the arms of four German soldiers, who were accompanied by the woman of whom he had inquired. She had given them away.

In the guardroom Zilliox considered his plight. He had been told that in the morning he and his companions would be taken to Aachen. That meant he would be unmasked. He whispered over a plan with the young Belgians, who themselves had little to fear from tomorrow's questioning.

IN the room were about 30 German soldiers. Some were asleep, others playing cards around a table. One stood guard over the four prisoners in a corner.

After a while, one of the Belgians, starting the plan in motion, asked permission to go to the toilet. The guard, motioning to another soldier to keep an eye on the three remaining prisoners, accompanied the first to the chamber.

Less than a minute later the other two Belgians drew off their boots, rose and carried them over to the stove, evidently to dry them. Zilliox rose and stretched.

Then it came. The two Belgians intentionally stumbled over the coal scuttle beside the stove, and it overturned, the clatter drawing the eyes of the amused soldiers.

At this instant of relaxation, Zilliox dived headlong through the window near which he had been standing. He vanished in the darkness of the late March night—and two hours later was over the border without any aid.

He found the distraught Hentjens in Maestricht and Hentjens said regretfully that he had been unable to renew the courier service; that if Zolliox wished to continue he might join the French Secret Service.

This was all to Zilliox's liking. At last he would be working directly for his country. It might even offer an opening for him to secure a passport to Paris, where he might again see his beloved bride. It was now two years and seven months since he had seen, or even heard from her or his family.

Because every available German of military age was in service, labor was scarce in Germany and many Dutch were working in the German mines at Richterich, close to the Dutch border.

This offered an ideal means for sending messages across the border, and two such men were employed by the French, one Wiertz, a Dutchman, and Kugel, a Belgian.

Also in the mines were employed a number of Belgians from the town of Moresnet, just across the German-Belgian border, and one of these Belgians was another link in the espionage "letter-box" chain between occupied Belgium and neutral Holland.

So again Zilliox slipped back into Belgium, this time as a French agent, and he went directly to the house of Mme. Delporte at Angleur, where he had set up his train-watching post, aided by her 20-year-old son.

Through those early April days, Zilliox sent back regular reports on troop movements in the area around Liege, and such other items of military information as came to his attention.

From him they went by courier to the Belgian miners, who carried the reports in their lunch boxes to the mines and turned them over to Wiertz and Kugel, these two transporting them to Holland when their day labor was done.

IF Zilliox had received warning on April 10, 1917, that Lecocq, Henrot and three of their men—Wathelet, Richter and Lelarge—had just been arrested, he might have taken the warning and fled in time.

Although it was never learned, it was presumed that a courier from Holland had given Lecocq and Henrot away, with the trail leading from them to Zilliox.

On April 11, while Zilliox and her son were upstairs at the watching post, a stranger came to the house of Mme. Delporte and asked if Auguste van Hoven (Zilliox) lived there.

Mme. Delporte was suspicious, but when she asked the caller who he was, his reply disarmed her.

"I belong to the same service as Auguste," he said, smiling. "I have a report to give him."

Not only did the woman make the mistake of admitting him before consulting Zilliox, but she conducted the stranger upstairs to the room where her son was just jotting down the makeup of a passing troop train.

"That's the way; one has got to have courage," said the caller, tapping the watching Zilliox on the shoulder.

Zilliox displayed no alarm, although he felt it. The man introduced himself as a courier from Holland and handed Zilliox a paper, supposedly a message from Maestricht. The the stranger excused himself with a remark that he had a meeting to keep, and he hurried away.

Now Zilliox was startled and he rose, telling young Delporte that this was the time to flee. Before they had time even to leave the room, however, the door was flung open again and there stood the recent visitor and another man, each with a gun.

"Hands up! German police!" barked the pseudo courier, who, it was learned subsequently, was Becker, a German secret police agent. The man with him was an agent named Kleiner.

The man and boy, roped together and handcuffed and accompanied by Mme. Delporte, were placed in a car and driven to the prison of St. Leonard, where they were joined six days later by Lejeune, also under arrest, and found that a 10th man, Wiertz, the Dutch courier, had been arrested.

MANY indignities were heaped upon Zilliox while he awaited trial. This undoubtedly was in retaliation for his melodramatic desertion, which had brought official wrath down upon the Secret Police and had resulted in removal of the commander at the barge operations.

Out of the 10 persons arrested, only two escaped execution. They were Mme. Delporte and her young son.

And even as he was led out in the dawn to face the firing squad, on July 23, 1917, the sneering Boche continued to humiliate him.

Instead of the usual garb of a prisoner going to his death, they forced him to don a German uniform, the rags of the nation he hated.

Standing there, with his back to the execution post, wearing the despised uniform, Zilliox faced the rifles. His head came up and his voice rang out in the morning air. Loudly and clearly he cried:

"Vive la France!"

Jane Bryan, 'Boston's Own' to See Preview

By PEGGY DOYLE

Whether or not playing Bette Davis' daughter in "The Old Maid" had anything to do with it, Hollywood's Jane Bryan (it is actually her home-town) in Boston last night revealed the same frank naturalness and friendly charm as the screen's First Lady.

She now ranks second only to Newton's Miss Davis as their favorite face-to-face movie star, according to an unofficial poll taken by the press at yesterday's party, in her honor at the Copley-Plaza.

Even Frank Luzio, who rarely relaxed his assistant maitre de hotel dignity, unbent sufficiently to prepare his specialty of the cuisine, Lobster Neuberg, for Miss Bryan when she expressed surprise that chicken, and not New England's celebrated piece de resistance, was on the luncheon menu.

But luncheon—and the press preview of her and Paul Muni's co-starring picture, "We Are Not Alone," which opens today on the Met screen—were incidental to the falling snow which warmed the California charmer's heart.

LOVES BOSTON WEATHER

"I love it," she exclaimed, delightedly, looking out at it from her Copley-Plaza Hotel suite. "I get so bored with the sameness of California weather. I adore wind and storm and hail and rain and snow. All of that weather happened last year on my first visit to New York. It was magnificent. I walked in it until I was drenched and exhausted.

"I have several weeks until I make my next picture—I don't know what it's to be yet—and I'm coming back here for a real visit in Boston. I think it's the most charming city—I'd love to live here."

And, while on the subject of weather, there's a rain-washed freshness about Jane Bryan's freckle-dappled skin and frank, clear eyes and a wind-tossed beauty about her un-permanented brown hair with its slight natural curl.

"SCHOOLGIRLISH"

The studio's Milo Anderson had fashioned the deceptively schoolgirlish olive-green jersey dress she was wearing. It was simple and stunning in the way that Hollywood is beginning to do as well, if not better, than the French couturieres.

Her small, draped hat which tied in the back with two streamers matched a block-plaided olive-green and beige polo coat, also by Anderson, which she had discarded for a collarless, three-quarters length mink coat.

Her only jewelry was a quaint arrangement of five narrow gold bands linked together, and each set with a different stone, emerald pearl, ruby, opal and sapphire spelling—you guessed it—ephros. A Greek word the erudite movie star defined as meaning "I Love You." It has no significance, she says. She had it copied from an admired antique ring belonging to a friend.

PRAISE FOR BETTE

About Bette Davis, who saw and press-agented Jane's performance in "Green Grow the Lilacs," put on by Jean Muir's Hollywood Workshop in 1936, and whose younger sister she was later in Warners' "Marked Woman," Jane Bryan is unstintingly appreciative.

JANE BRYAN

"Coach me? Oh, no, and as for giving young players readings or telling them how to play a role, Bette would never dream of doing that," she said. "There's nothing that I can explain except to say that she's been the greatest help any aspiring screen player could have.

"For instance, on the set, if a scene is going along in a straight line—if it's an honest scene—I can tell just by looking at Bette. It's like throwing a ball and having someone catch it."

Pa. Democratic Chief 'Denies All'

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 23 (AP)—Announcement that David L. Lawrence, Democratic chairman of Pennsylvania, would deny from the witness stand that he ever demanded or received $5000 in cash as blackmail money or as a political contribution from a gravel dealer was made today by Lawrence's counsel.

Spurgeon Bowser, former president of the Pioneer Materials Company, has testified at Lawrence's trial on blackmail and conspiracy charges that he paid the money to Lawrence after repeated demands for twice that amount.

The payment was made, he said, when Lawrence was Secretary of the Commonwealth in Pennsylvania's recent Democratic administration.

Boy, 14, Shoots Dad To Save Mother

TOLEDO, O., Nov. 23 (INS)—Warren Mead, 14, an eighth grade pupil at Point Place School, shot his father, Russell Ward, 43, in the foot as the father struggled with his divorced wife, Mrs. Edith A. Meade, 43, in her home, police said.

Police said the shooting occurred after Ward had invaded the home of his former wife, a school teacher.

N. E. Boiled Dinners Boston Fare Today

Christmas comes but one a year—and so does Thanksgiving for rock-ribbed New England.

That's why a regular Thursday boiled dinner was on tap here today while President Roosevelt and those in the District of Columbia and 22 states were sitting down to turkey and all the fixin's.

Some students at Harvard, many federal employes and the army, navy and national guard were on record for serious turkey eating, but the rest of New England drew in, belts and waited determinedly for the annual feast of the Pilgrims one week hence.

In the national field the score showed the Pilgrims a slight lead with 23 states holding off for another week and 22 states going along today with the President.

Three states which straddled the fence by celebrating both days were Mississippi, Texas and Colorado.

"BUSINESS AS USUAL"

The town of Plymouth, birthplace of Thanksgiving, observed Thursday, without any reference to the President's holiday.

Residents of the Pilgrim town, where the first Thanksgiving was celebrated 318 years ago, went about business as usual.

All were intent on a monster public celebration next Thursday, to which every state in the nation has sent some article of food for a dinner and pageant depicting the first Thanksgiving of the Pilgrim Fathers.

In Boston, it was no holiday for the postmen. Although PWA and many other federal employes were given the day off, Postmaster Peter Tague kept his men on duty in line with Gov. Saltonstall's proclamation of the "fourth Thursday." They will celebrate Nov. 30.

This, Tague said, was because Boston business houses had remained open. Other federal departments in Boston were closed. At the immigration station in East Boston, Thanksgiving dinner was served to 88 aliens in custody there.

The Boston Licensing Board took no notice of today's federal proclamation, observing the regular hours for liquor sales.

BYRD FLAGSHIP SAILS TO ANTARCTIC IN GALE

Ploughing through heavy seas the 68-year-old barkentine "Bear of Oakland" was off on the first leg of her trip to Antarctic today after a departure which offered a taste of the storms she will encounter in Polar seas.

The flagship of Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd's expedition sailed in the teeth of a gale which Weatherman G. Harold Noyes declared was "a corking storm at sea."

Forty-mile winds and the first real snow of the year blanketed Boston but swept out to sea in a swirling snowstorm.

With the storm blowing itself out, cloudy skies were forecast for today and fair and warmer weather tomorrow.

Now officially the U. S. S. Bear, the weather-beaten craft had put out from the Atlantic Works where she was refitted.

Whistles of harbor craft tooted and 80 sled dogs barked a response to the farewell of relatives and friends at the dock.

The trip of the ship to Antarctica is the longest undertaken by a sailing vessel of the U. S. Navy since the advent of steam vessels, though she sailed from Boston powered by an auxiliary Diesel engine. She carried 60,000 gallons of oil for the engine, and planned to stop at Panama to replenish the supply. Little use will be made of her sails while the engines can be used.

At Norfolk the ship will put in to take aboard an airplane.

It is expected that Admiral Byrd, now at Washington attending to details of the expedition, will join his "fleet," composed of the North Star, which sailed from here last week, and the barkentine, which is his flagship, at Panama.

The Bear of Oakland will carry all the food, clothing, recreational equipment, dogs, sleds and miscellaneous supplies to keep the expedition alive for at least 13 months of their search for new land, resources, including radium beneath the South Polar ice cap.

25 States Feast, 23 Wait

Families [illegible] sat down [illegible] Table of the nation's dual Thanksgiving joining in President Roosevelt's expressed hope that the world soon will be at peace.

The "Second Table" will not be served until next Thursday, in states whose governors decided to follow the President's decision to advance the holiday a week.

Despite the confusion over the date, there was unanimity in pulpits and in quiet households in echoing Mr. Roosevelt's proclamation.

"Let us give thanks to the ruler of the Universe for the hope that lives within us of the coming of the day when peace and the productive activities of peace shall reign on every continent."

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt led today's celebrants. As usual, Mr. Roosevelt will carve a big turkey tonight at the Warm Springs, Ga., infantile paralysis foundation.

Three states Colorado, Texas and Mississippi go' around the argument over dates by assigning two Thanksgiving Days. Mayors of several cities did the same thing. Mayor C. D. White of Atlantic City, N. J., in proclaiming two holidays said last night:

"Tomorrow shall be celebrated by the city as 'Thanksgiving,' in honor of our President, and next Thursday shall be celebrated as Thanksgiving."

Mayor R. A. Toliver of Pecos, Tex., merely left the date in his proclamation blank, so that residents could make their own choice.

The early holiday left unprepared the Pamunkey Indians, who have a reservation near Richmond, Va. They customarily furnish the Virginia governor with a deer or turkey for his Thanksgiving dinner. This time they had to send Gov. James H. Price a message:

"The new Thanksgiving didn't give us time to hunt. Weather has been bad. We could not locate game. We're sorry."

In Washington government offices were closed.

Thanksgiving usually is a big day for football fans, but today's gridiron fare was slim for schedules are made months and even years in advance and can't be easily revised.

The second Thanksgiving will find a larger number of end-of-season games.

Yesteryear's Cars Still Roll

HARTFORD, Ct., Nov. 23 (AP) —The automobiles of yesteryears are not all in the junk pile.

Do you remember the days of the Rambler, Pope-Hartford, Columbia and Toledo? Cars bearing those names are still roaming Connecticut's highways —or, at least, are licensed to do so the State Motor Vehicle Department reported today, together with many others bearing names "familiar 25 years ago, but unknown to most of today's generation."

The oldest of the more than a half million registered automobiles are two 1904 models.

Ice Cream Gala Dessert

By MARTHA LEE

The rock bound coast of New England must have discouraged Puritan homemakers who prided themselves on their cookery. But they persevered, experimenting with the new foods of a new world until they had evolved a very palatable diet.

Whether you are planning holiday menus to honor these courageous early Americans, or merely seeking nourishing desserts to enchance budget dinners, ice cream is an ideal choice. Serve it for Thanksgiving, rich with nuts—one of the standbys of the early settlers—and pass maple syrup as a sauce.

BUTTER PECAN ICE CREAM
(Automatic Refrigerator Method)

2-3 cup sweetened condensed milk
2 tbsp. melted butter
½ cup water
½ tsp. vanilla
1 cup whipping cream
½ cup pecan nut meats, finely chopped

Blend milk and melted butter.

IF YOU are planning holiday menus or just seeking nourishing desserts to enhance budget dinners, ice cream is a good choice. Serve it with nuts and maple syrup for real enjoyment.

Add water and vanilla. Chill. Whip cream to custard-like consistency. Fold into chilled mixture. Pour into freezing tray. Place in freezing unit. When mixture is about half frozen, remove from refrigerator. Scrape mixture from sides and bottom of tray. Add nut meats. Beat until smooth, but not melted. Smooth out and replace in freezing unit until frozen for serving. Serves six.

PEANUT BRITTLE ICE CREAM
(Automatic Refrigerator Method)

2-3 cup sweetened condensed milk
½ cup water
½ tsp. vanilla
1 cup whipping cream
1 cup crushed peanut brittle

Blend milk, water and vanilla thoroughly. Chill. Whip cream to custard-like consistency and fold into chilled mixture. Pour into freezing tray. Place in freezing unit. When mixture is about half frozen remove from refrigerator. Scrape mixture from sides and bottom of tray. Beat until smooth but not melted. Smooth out and replace in freezing unit until frozen for serving. Serves six.

Before the first Thanksgiving was celebrated the Puritans had discovered the flavor joys of maple syrup. And when the first snow came they concocted a tempting sweet by pouring maple syrup slowly on snow.

Maple nut ice cream is a delectable descendant of this early sweet. Serve it for Thanksgiving dessert. This nourishing delicacy is a thrifty one made with this recipe that calls for only one cup of cream and 2-3 cup of sweetened condensed milk.

MAPLE NUT ICE CREAM
(Automatic Refrigerator Method)

2-3 cup sweetened condensed milk
½ cup water
2 tsp. maple flavoring
¼ cup chopped nut meats
1 cup whipping cream

Mix sweetened condensed milk, water and maple flavoring thoroughly. Chill. Whip cream to custard-like consistency and fold into chilled mixture. Fold in chopped nut meats. Pour into freezing pan. Place in freezing unit. After mixture is about half frozen remove from refrigerator. Scrape mixture from sides and bottom of pan. Beat until smooth but not melted. Smooth out and replace in freezing unit until frozen for serving. Serves six. Garnish with nut meats.

Serve the maple nut ice cream with chocolate logs made this way:

MAGIC CHOCOLATE LOGS

1 square unsweetened chocolate
2-3 cup sweetened condensed milk
¼ tsp vanilla
1 cup sifted confectioners' (4X) sugar (about)
½ cup cocoanut, toasted

Melt chocolate in top of double boiler. Add milk and stir over rapidly boiling water five minutes until mixture thickens. Remove from heat. Add vanilla and confectioners' sugar gradually and blend thoroughly. Shape into rolls two inches long. Roll in toasted cocoanut. Allow to stand in cold place several hours or until firm. Makes about 18.

Good Manners

Requesting Reply to Invitation

By MRS. BEECKMAN

"Requests the pleasure of your company" on an invitation, means that the invitation should be answered. The word "requests" implies an answer. But to make assurance doubly sure in these busy days, when people are apt to be careless or thoughtless about answering them promptly, a more urgent request-for-an-answer is often added to an invitation. (This is, however, never added to a formal dinner invitation.)

When an answer is requested, the form most often used is R. s. v. p. These letters stand for the French phrase "Repondez s'il vous plait," meaning "Answer, please." It is important to remember that when we write R. s. v. p., only the "R" is capitalized, just as we would capitalize only the "A" if the English equivalent, "Answer, please," were written.

On such a formal invitation as an invitation to a wedding reception, usually the form "The favour of an answer as requested" is used, since this is more consistent with the formality of the wording of the invitation.

You Can be Beautiful

New Carnation Perfume

By ARLINE GOULD

UNSURPASSABLE chic seems to surround the carnation as a daytime flower . . . not one bloom, but a tight little knot of five or six in a brilliant or pastel contrast for a suit is "coming up" again to give individuality and cachet. Bright red carnations on a winter-green suit, f'r'instance.

And at the same time, a new carnation perfume makes its debut. But this one is really something that deserves the raves it's getting.

In the first place, it is made by a world famous beauty expert. She expends years of research before sponsoring a new fragrance, and inevitably each one is a triumph. It is always usually distinctive, women of discriminating taste flock to buy her inspirations, and thus have a tremendous appeal and unmistakable lure . . . men seem to find them inescapable intriguing on their women.

This new carnation perfume is gay, versatile, and terribly exciting with furs, because it gives their lushness a refreshing touch of whimsy. Yet, after dusk, it seems to gain an exotic quality and becomes "femme fatale."

As in all her creations this new one has an indefinable quality between sheer exuberance and restraint. They have always been the perfumes of ladies.

It's charmingly packaged. A square bottle with cut glass stopper in a field of varicolored flowers and encased in a transparent box.

If you'd like to learn all about this new carnation perfume, phone Arline Gould, LIBerty 4000, week-days until 5:30, or write, enclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope.

Love

Too Many Girl Friends

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I'm 22 years old and have been told by my friends that I am handsome. I've gone out with quite a few of the girls in my crowd but never seemed to care for anyone in particular.

And now I think I've fallen in love with a girl, at least I want to meet her a few weeks ago and started going with her. I've already thought of buying an engagement ring on her birthday which is coming soon. But now I hear tale, because she's kind of peeved at me and acts as if she doesn't care to see me any more.

Upon insisting to know the reason for her "mad," she told me that she heard I had been running around with every girl in the neighborhood, and that she doesn't care to go with a boy who was so much talked about by everyone. I told her I didn't intend to go with other girls any more and that I really love her, but she wouldn't listen.

T.

If the girl persists in turning you down, I'm afraid you will have to charge it up to experience and in future be less of a sheik among the girls in your neighborhood. I believe, however, that if you persist and show the girl you really are in earnest this time, she may relent and you will be restored to her good graces. Here's hoping.

A Christmas Carol

By CHARLES DICKENS

Mrs. Crachit—flushed, but smiling proudly—with the pudding.

Poverty Melts at Miraculous Touch Of Merry Yuletide Ghost

"WELL! never mind, so long as you are come," said Mrs. Cratchit. "Sit ye down before the fire, my dear, and have a warm, Lord bless ye!"

"No, no! There's Father coming," cried the two young Cratchits, who were everywhere at once. "Hide, Martha, hide!"

So Martha hid herself, and in came little Bob, the father, with at least three foot of comforter exclusive of the fringe hanging down before him; and his threadbare clothes darned up and brushed, to look seasonable; and Tiny Tim upon his shoulder. Also for Tiny Tim, he bore a little crutch and had his limbs supported by an iron frame!

"Why, where's our Martha?" cried Bob Cratchit, looking round.

"Not coming," said Mrs. Cratchit.

"Not coming!" said Bob, with a sudden declension in his high spirits; for he had been Tim's blood horse all the way from church, and had come home rampant. "Not coming upon Christmas Day!"

Martha didn't like to see him disappointed, if it were only in joke, so she came out prematurely from behind the closet door, and ran into his arms, while the two young Cratchits hustled Tiny Tim and bore him off into the wash-house, that he might hear the pudding singing in the copper.

"And how did little Tim behave?" asked Mrs. Cratchit, when she had rallied Bob on his credulity, and Bob had hugged his daughter to his heart's content.

"As good as gold," said Bob, "and better. Somehow he gets thoughtful, sitting by himself so much, and thinks the strangest things you ever heard. He told me, coming home, that he hoped the people saw him at the church, because he was a cripple, and it might be pleasant to them to remember upon Christmas Day who made lame beggars walk and blind men see."

There never was such a goose. Bob said he didn't believe there ever was such a goose cooked. Its tenderness and flavor, size and cheapness, were the themes of universal admiration. Eked out by apple sauce and mashed potatoes, it was a sufficient dinner for the whole family; indeed as Mrs. Cratchit said with great delight (surveying one small atom of a bone upon the dish), they hadn't ate it all at last!

Yet every one had had enough and the youngest Cratchits, in particular, were steeped in sage and onion to the eyebrows! But now the plates being changed by Miss Belinda; Mrs. Cratchit left the room—too nervous to bear witness—to take the pudding up and bring it in.

> The Story So Far:
> SCROOGE, having touched the Ghost of Christmas Present, is magically transported to the humble Cratchit home, where a merry Yuletide party celebrates the holy season. A wiser man, he silently contemplates the inspiring scene.

Suppose it should not be done enough! Suppose it should break in turning out! Suppose somebody should have got over the wall of the backyard, and stolen it, while they were merry with the goose—a supposition at which the two young Cratchits became livid! All sorts of horrors were supposed.

THE PUDDING!

Hallo! A great deal of steam! The pudding was out of the copper. A smell like a washing-day! That was the cloth. A smell like an eating-house and a pastry-cook's next door to each other, with a laundress' next to that! That was the pudding! In half a minute Mrs. Cratchit entered—flushed, but smiling proudly—with the pudding, like a speckled cannon-ball, so hard and firm, blazing in half-a-quartern of ignited brandy, and crowned with Christmas holly stuck into the top.

Oh a wonderful pudding! Bob Cratchit said, and calmly, too, that he regarded it as the greatest success achieved by Mrs. Cratchit since their marriage. Mrs. Cratchit said that now the weight was off her mind she would confess she had her doubts about the quantity of flour. Everybody had something to say about it, but nobody said or thought it was at all a small pudding for a large family. It would have been flat heresy to do so. Any Cratchit would have blushed to hint at such a thing.

At last the dinner was all done, the cloth was cleared, the hearth swept and the fire made up. The compound in the jug being tasted, and considered perfect, apples and oranges were put upon the table, and a shovel full of chestnuts on the fire. Then all the Cratchit family drew round the hearth in what Bob Cratchit called a circle, meaning half a one and at Bob Cratchit's elbow stood the family display of glass. Two tumblers and a custard-cup without a handle.

These held the hot stuff from the jug, however, as well as golden goblets would have done; and Bob served it out with beaming looks, while the chestnuts on the fire sputtered and cracked noisily. Then Bob proposed:

"A Merry Christmas to us all, my dears. God bless us!"

Which all the family re-echoed.

"God bless us every one!" said Tiny Tim, the last of all.

He sat very close to his father's side, upon his little stool. Bob held his withered little hand in his, as if he loved the child, and wished to keep him by his side, and dreaded that he might be taken from him.

"Spirit," said Scrooge, with an interest he had never felt before, "tell me if Tiny Tim will live."

"I see a vacant seat," replied the Ghost, "in the poor chimney-corner, and a crutch without an owner, carefully preserved. If these shadows remain unaltered by the future, the child will die."

"No, no," said Scrooge. "Oh, no, kind Spirit! say he will be spared."

"If these shadows remain unaltered by the future, none other of my race," returned the Ghost, "will find him here. What then! If he be like to die, he had better do it, and decrease the surplus population."

Scrooge hung his head to hear his own words quoted by the Spirit and was overcome with penitence and grief.

"Man," said the Ghost, "if man you be in heart, not adamant, forbear that wicked cant until you have discovered What the surplus is, and Where it is. Will you decide what men shall live, what men shall die? It may be that, in the sight of Heaven, you are more worthless and less fit to live than millions like this poor man's child."

Scrooge bent before the Ghost's rebuke and, trembling, cast his eyes upon the ground. But he raised them speedily, on hearing his name.

"Mr. Scrooge!" said Bob; "I'll give you Mr. Scrooge, the Founder of the Feast!"

"The Founder of the Feast, indeed!" cried Mrs. Cratchit, reddening. "I wish I had him here. I'd give him a piece of my mind to feast upon, and I hope he'd have a good appetite for it."

"My dear," said Bob, "the children! Christmas Day."

"It should be Christmas Day, I am sure," said she, "on which one drinks the health of such an odious, stingy, hard, unfeeling man as Mr. Scrooge. You know he is, Robert. Nobody knows it better than you do, poor fellow?"

"My dear," was Bob's mild answer; "Christmas Day."

"I'll drink his health for your sake and the Day's," said Mrs. Cratchit, "not his. Long life to him. A merry Christmas and a happy New Year! He'll be very merry and very happy, I have no doubt."

The children drank the toast after her. It was the first of their proceedings which had no heartiness in it. Tiny Tim drank it last of all, but he didn't care two-pence for it. Scrooge was the Ogre of the family. The mention of his name cast a dark shadow on the party, which was not dispelled for full five minutes.

After it had passed away they were 10 times merrier than before, from the mere relief of Scrooge the Baleful being done with. Bob Cratchit told them how he had a situation in his eye for Master Peter, which would bring in, if obtained, full five and six pence weekly. The two young Cratchits laughed tremendously at the idea of Peter's being a man of business, and Peter himself looked thoughtfully at the fire from between his collar, as if he were deliberating what particular investments he should favor when he came into the receipt of that bewildering income.

Martha, who was a poor apprentice at a milliner's, then told them what kind of work she had to do, and how many hours she worked at a stretch, and how she meant to lie a-bed tomorrow morning for a good long rest, tomorrow being a holiday she passed at home.

Also how she had seen a Countess and a Lord some days before, and how the Lord "was much about as tall as Peter"; at which Peter pulled up his collar so high that you couldn't have seen his head if you had been there.

All this time the chestnuts and the jug went round and round, and by-the-by they had a song, about a lost child traveling in the snow, from Tiny Tim, who had a plaintive little voice and sang it very well indeed.

There was nothing of high mark in this. They were not a handsome family; they were not well dressed; their shoes were far from being waterproof; their clothes were scanty; and Peter might have known, and very likely did, the inside of a pawnbroker's.

But they were happy, grateful, pleased with one another, and contented with the time, and when they faded and looked happier yet in the bright sprinklings of the Spirit's torch at parting Scrooge had his eye upon them, and especially on Tiny Tim, until the last.

By this time it was getting dark and snowing pretty heavily, and, as Scrooge and the Spirit went along the streets, the brightness of the roaring fires in kitchens, parlors and all sorts of rooms was wonderful.

Here, the flickering of the blaze showed preparations for a cozy dinner with hot plates baking through before the fire, and deep red curtains, ready to be drawn to shut out cold and darkness.

There, all the children of the house were running out into the snow to meet their married sisters, brothers, cousins, aunts and be the first to greet them.

Here, again, were shadows on the window blinds of guests assembling and there a group of handsome girls, all hooded and furbooted, and all chattering at once, tripped lightly off to some near neighbor's house, where, woes upon the single man who saw them enter—artful witches, well they knew it—in a glow.

But, if you had judged from the numbers of people on their way to friendly gatherings, you might have thought that no one was at home to give them welcome when they got there, instead of every house expecting company and piling up its fires half-chimney high. Blessings on it, how the Ghost exulted! How it bared its breadth of breast and opened its capacious palm and floated on, outpouring, with a generous hand, its bright and harmless mirth on everything within its reach!

The very lamplighter, who ran on before, dotting the dusky streets with specks of light and who was dressed to spend the evening somewhere, laughed out lustily as the Spirit passed, though little kenned the lamplighter that he had any company but Christmas!

Be sure to read tomorrow's chapter and learn what Scrooge's family thinks of him.

BE AMERICAN

THIS IS Thanksgiving Day in 22 States which have followed the leadership of President Roosevelt and moved the date of the historic observance a week ahead. Twenty-three States, including all New England, hold to the traditional "last Thursday in November." And three States—Mississippi, Texas and Colorado—impartially celebrate both today and a week hence.

The confusion which results from the two dates is the first of its kind in 75 years. From the administration of Abraham Lincoln, who selected the last Thursday of November, 1864, for Thanksgiving, Presidential proclamations have until this year followed precedent.

Only once was the tradition broken. That was when President Grant, in 1869, chose Thursday, November 18.

Before Abraham Lincoln's request for one day for nationwide feasting and prayer, Thanksgiving was a rather uncertain event. Early New Englanders had observed it on occasions in August. Connecticut settlers preferred September 20.

As we see it, the date is not so important as the deeply religious spirit that INSPIRES Thanksgiving.

Whether the American enjoys turkey and cranberry sauce today or on November 30, he will not fail to express his gratitude for this God-respecting nation and its God-fearing people having been spared participation in the ruinous warfare abroad.

And thankful FOR PEACEFUL AMERICA, in which blessings beyond the dreams of those who laid the foundations of universal liberty are the priceless possessions of the least of us, he will not neglect a prayer that this country, UNDER GOD, shall keep and deserve freedom.

A RELIABLE SIGN of recovery in the United States is the boom in home appliance sales.

During the first six months of 1939, 482,997 MORE automatic refrigerators were sold than during the corresponding period in 1938.

Electric washing machines, ranges, water heaters, vacuum cleaners, power ironers, kitchen utensils and decorative lamps are also being purchased in volumes never before equalled.

Clearly, the American standard of living has survived the late depression. Luxuries and modern conveniences appeal powerfully to our people. AND THEY ARE OBTAINING THEM!

TRAVEL FACILITIES and opportunities in our six States will receive deserved attention at the 15th New England Conference today and tomorrow.

Sounding the keynote for the important parley, Chairman Glenwood J. Sherrard tells us:

"With travel abroad virtually at a standstill, New England must now make plans to bring to New England those individuals who ordinarily spend their vacations in Europe.

"If we can attract a portion of the $214,000,000 that is spent each year in European travel, this region can look forward to a satisfactory season this winter and next summer."

That is good advice. Though our recreational industry ranks second in importance and provides employment for more than a half million persons, it is still in its early infancy.

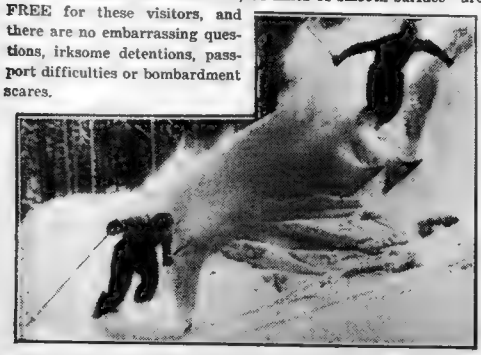
Our climate is as healthful and invigorating as Norway's. Our mountains are as beautiful and as suited to sports activity as Switzerland's. Our villages have all the charm of rural England with the added attraction of Yankee hospitality.

The progress we have made in past years can and should be increased a hundred times in the next six months.

Ski enthusiasts, skaters and tobogganists need not journey 3000 and more miles to Chamonix, France; St. Moritz, Switzerland; Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Bavaria, or the Italian Alps.

Thrills a-plenty and joy abundant await them here in AMERICAN New England.

The nation's best roads—19,195 miles of smooth surface—are FREE for these visitors, and there are no embarrassing questions, irksome detentions, passport difficulties or bombardment scares.



WHY NEW ENGLAND IS NATION'S WINTER PLAYGROUND

The Swing

IT isn't that you fly so high . . . when swinging, though below you see . . . the birds' nests cuddled in the tree . . . and then again, as up you fly . . . the meadows and the marsh beyond . . . the river and the old mill-pond.

But best of all, it so appears . . . you sense the rhythm of the spheres . . . and swinging high, you feel in tune . . . with Mother Earth, stars, sun, and moon.

Human Side of News

-:- By EDWIN C. HILL

COLLEGE LADS home for vacations provide an augury of a brighter world, and much to be thankful for. They are not only the best-dressed collegians in the world, but they are the least regimented, the most adaptative and varied in their raiment and they aren't afraid of a dash of color.

In this, they are in better accord with nature than the old stick-in-the-muds who settle down in a suit of sharkskin gray and let the gorgeous seasons roll by without response to the stimulus to changing color and design.

NATURE'S third-act curtain in early November is unquestionably a lure into the new-clothes parade. She drapes the hills with fabrics of red and gold and green, of infinite subtlety and shading; she devises light patterns through the trees, shadow, mass, color and detail. She seems to say, "This is the way to meet the gray days. I'm showing you how."

And as an epilogue, she holds out frost-proof chrysanthemums, beautiful and varied color distillations of the passing year. The idea is, of course, that we have the tailor build you a new suit around this lovely red-rust-gold number, and don't be afraid of a fleck of color and a dash of abandon, in the design and fabric.

The free use of color, innovations in dress, all the breakaway from the old blue-nose tradition, have been pioneered by youth. Here the child is, indeed, father to the man.

We just happened to learn the other day that seven years passed before men in general, as distinguished from the collegians, would accept color in shirts. Men out in the business or professional lock-step insisted on remaining "men in white."

The college boys didn't give a whoop for staid tradition. They grabbed the stripes and polka dots and whatnot, and here are attractive, colorful shirt patterns at last as firmly established as the Brooklyn Bridge. Youngsters, too led in appropriate, and freer and bolder color combinations in haberdashery and suits.

CLOTHES may not make the man, but they pep him up a lot. Here's a tale of a Maine village:

Ezra and Deborah liked each other. The village preacher, every Christmas, gave Ezra a cast-off suit of sober black. Every Fourth of July, the village bartender gave him a suit with loud checks or stripes.

When Ezra wore the preacher's suit, he was too timid to propose. When he wore the bartender's suit, he was so bold and boisterous that Deborah wouldn't have anything to do with him.

Years passed and it looked hopeless. But once, when the season was changing, Ezra got mixed up and wore the bartender's coat and the preacher's pants. The coat rushed him bravely into Deborah's parlor, and the pants plunked him down on his knees in an attitude of supplication.

She said, "Yes, dear," and they were married and lived happily ever after.

GLORIFYING THE MALE OF THE SPECIES

"Clothes May Not Make Man, But They Pep Him Up a Lot"

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt

-:- MY DAY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23—It was interesting at lunch to talk to Miss Cecile Hamilton about the problems of the woman aviator. Apparently, they may spend a great deal of money learning how to fly and never get a chance at a job.

I recalled that some time ago a study was being made of the resistance of women to different strains experienced in flying, so I asked if this study had ever been completed. Apparently, it is still in the indecisive stage.

There must, however, be possibilities for women pilots to be helpful. It seems to me that it would be well to canvass the value of the service they could render in cases of emergency. For instance, during floods and disasters of various kinds, the Army flies supplies of food and medicine.

A woman who could both take a turn as a pilot and be useful on landing in assisting women and children might be valuable.

I HAVE WONDERED for a long time whether, in taking a new census, it would not be a wise thing to tabulate the returns where the women are concerned, from the point of view of their usefulness in emergencies in their own localities.

It might even be a good thing to set up certain centers where women could take training in occupations where they were qualified in time of need, every woman would then know exactly what her job was, or what she could volunteer to do.

Just now, when we have so many unemployed young people, it would seem to me a great opportunity to develop them for the future and give them a feeling that they are doing something in the way of service to their country.

I spent some time this morning wandering through the exposition of painting and sculpture designed for Federal buildings and held in the Corcoran Art Gallery. It will remain open until next Sunday.

It is very different from that first WPA show which was hung on these same walls. There is a calmness and security in most of this painting, though a greater consciousness of social conditions is shown in paintings like "Contemporary Justice and the Child," by Symeon Schimin.

FOR DECORATIVE quality, I think our Indian artists always stand out. A group of them are working on decorations in the Interior Department Building, which I am looking forward to seeing.

The winner of the contest for the St. Louis, Mo., postoffice murals, Edward Millman and Mitchell Siporin, have an extraordinarily interesting design. The work will not be finished for two years. Each of the 48 States held a competition and the room in which the paintings by the winners of this competition are exhibited would be well worth a long study.

It seems a shame to single out any individual for mention when the whole exhibition is so worth while. I feel I want to congratulate all those who have sent in work for this exhibition.

PAT DI CICCO, who came to New York to sign Brenda Frazier to a film contract, is her favorite escort these days, but no longer discusses business with her . . . Sam Zimbalist, the producer, was the one who first suggested Brenda to Louis B. Mayer—who confessed that he never had heard of her. "She's the most talked about girl in America," Zimbalist assured Mayer. "You can't pick up a magazine without finding a picture of Brenda in it" . . . He went to the outer office, found eight issues of a magazine, thumbed through every page—and couldn't find a single photo of Brenda Diana Duff Frazier.

WHEN the curtain descended on Sidney Kingsley's new hit play, "The World We Make," Harry Warner saw two men respond to the calls for "author." One was Kingsley; the other, mustached, was Millen Brand, who wrote the book from which the play was adapted. Warner, whose money is backing the show, asked eagerly: "Which one is Kingsley?"

MEMO TO G. W. "MAN ABOUT BOSTON" CLARKE: If you get up today before Police Commissioner Timilty leaves his office, ask him about your "orchidaceous man." . . . I got the tip too late to connect with the P. C. . . . The Commish and Captain Harvey (of Station 16) have had the young man on the griddle for hours . . . The interviewing took place at headquarters, but the darling of the debs was moved to Captain Harvey's jug for a brief stay . . . In Boston, the cops can hold a fellow as a suspicous person for 48 hours.

A CHARGE MUST then be made if the suspect is to be held longer in durance vile . . . Well, your interesting bucko who presided at the swanky nightclub as glamour boy and greeter until the management was tipped off, has been released or moved . . . He is not at Captain Harvey's clink—and that is about all I could learn early today . . . Lieutenant Murphy wouldn't talk, and Captain Gleavey—who bosses the department at night—was cordial but not communicative . . . Your orchidacious boy's case is regarded as the Police Commissioner's private province . . . So it may be very interesting.

AND, BY THE WAY, and this has nothing to do with talking with Joseph P. ask him whether it has been a case of beauty on parade at the sixth floor of H. Q. . . . I know for a fact that at least two, and possibly more, of Boston's nicest little debutantes—as well as a gal who is nice but not a debutante—have been questioned by both Captain Harvey and the Commish within the past few days . . . The youngsters have not, of course, been grilled as suspects . . . They have been questioned about their jewels and about their meetings with Mr. Orchidaceous.

AUD BY THE WAY, and this has nothing to do with the case . . . Have you heard that a certain hit show acclaimed by Boston had so many butterflies in the cast that the management figured they'd save money on transportation, and let the boys FLY under their own power to New York?

PIPELINE TO PRIVATE PRECINCTS or what's new in the Big House? . . . Not a new way of "scoring" a bribe, but a reliable one in the majority of cases didn't work at Charlestown last week, and an officer—a guard—has been ordered to resign . . . The charge was accepting a $10 bribe from a lifer . . . Deputy Warden Graves became suspicious when the lifer bought a money order out of his funds, and addressed it to a supposed relative supposedly residing in a prominent downtown hotel . . . The deputy turned the prisoner's money transfer over to the Warden, and the lifer was tossed in the merry old hole in the Cherry Hill section . . . He talked . . . The guard was supposed to claim the sawbuck at the hotel.

WYMAN, REAGAN IN ALBERT'S FILM

By Louella O. Parsons

EN ROUTE TO PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 23 Happy Thanksgiving everybody! While we were waiting for the fog to lift so our big TWA plane could take off from San Francisco I received news from Warners that made Jane Wyman and Ronald Reagan very happy. The minute they return to Hollywood they're going into Eddie Albert's first, a starring picture, "For the Rich They Sing," which will seem like old home week to the youngsters since Eddie, Jane and Ronnie all appeared in the two "Brother Rat" pictures.

"For the Rich They Sing" is a collegiate comedy with a political slant which will be very timely with election year coming up. Personally, I think Warners are wise to keep Eddie Albert in a collegiate background. They tell me he gives a very good performance as the young doctor in "Four Wives," but I thought he was wasted as the Broadway hoofer in "On Your Toes." Claude Rains will also have a top spot in this original by Jerry Wald and Richard MacAulay which gets under way in February.

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD AND SAN FRANCISCO: Had our last dinner before leaving San Francisco at Monaco's—one of the few remaining places on the Barbary Coast which was used as a locale in Jeannette MacDonald's "San Francisco." We're all leaving here feeling very happy over the way we were received; Bob Ritchie buying Zorina's dinner at the House of Murphy and she was the sensation of the place, wearing a snood made entirely of violets.

BOB COBB'S a very happy boy because Gail Patrick got back from New York in time to eat Thanksgiving dinner with him; Slapsy Maxie Rosenbloom wants to know "if the day after Thanksgiving there'll be drumsticks along the Mohawk?" It's going to be just a quiet little family dinner for Sonja Henie and her mother entertaining Alan Curtis as the only guest; Merle Oberon and Alexander Korda and Sylvia Fairbanks and her sister have gone to Palm Springs for the holiday.

* * *

LLOYD NOLAN is waiting for Mrs. Nolan to recover from that bad fall she had from a horse so they can take that long planned vacation; Cobina Wright, Sr., and Anita Louise's mother attracting almost as much attention as their beautiful daughters at the Somerset House when all four lunched together; winging away up in the air it doesn't seem much like Thanksgiving to us—but then we "troupers" can't complain too much about missing the festive family gatherings in Hollywood.

DAILY STORY

Reunion

ON THE VINE-WREATHED pillars and winding walls of Ramble House the softened light of the setting sun was shining. May flowers had wakened to life, the fair spring blossoms whose delicate perfume mingled with the evening air stole through the open casement softly kissing the leaden-hued cheek of my sweet, little old lady patient.

Day Nurse Teressa had gone for her evening walk in the garden, and I was alone with the pathetic little figure lying so terribly quiet on the smooth snowy bed beside me.

Slowly the faded eyes opened and looked into mine.

"Not yet." I answered the mute question of those rapidly dimming eyes.

WHY DID SHE not come, this daughter, the only living being to whom this tiny mother belonged? She should have been here an hour ago, had she started at once after receiving our telegram.

Softly, as if indeed it were the rustle of an angel's wings, came the fragrant evening air through the open casement, and I became quietly aware of a fluttering gray shadow between me and my dying patient.

I was prepared for her passing on at any moment. For hours now Nurse Teressa and I had marveled at the almost super-human effort she had displayed in hanging on to that last silvery thread of life. Waiting, hoping to see her only child once more! But I was wholly unprepared when she suddenly sat up in her bed with a glad joyous cry of welcome on her smiling lips.

"Nina darling," she cried, "I waited for you. I saw the train coming. Now we will go together." Her thin wasted arms closed lovingly about an unseen loved one, as she fell back dead.

SO VERY SOON after came the telegram informing us of the auto accident in which her daughter Nina had been killed by a train as she hastened to her dying mother's bedside.

Strange, I mused; it could have happened at just about the time I saw the shadow.

How, I have often wondered, was it possible for my patient, hovering on the borderland, to see this accident so far away?

True? Perhaps, who can tell.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

ARE YOU 17? Then life is still half adventure tale, half dream. Sometimes intensely real—catching you up in tingling ecstasies, hurling you down in desperate despondencies, whirling you about in violent furies.

And the next moment—as vague and distant as a desert mirage, unsubstantial, eluding physical and mental grasp?

But always, at 17, life is intensely personal. You realize there are other people on earth . . . other experiences than yours. But they have no place in your consciousness save as they affect you personally. Life means YOU—at 17.

ARE YOU 27? Life, if you're normal, has changed at 27. It is no longer so dream like. It has become much more real—painfully real.

You clearly see—or think you see—its heartlessness and hopelessness. Sometimes you rail against it. More often you resign yourself to sour cynicism—or embittered indifference. There are times—too many times—when you hate life and conclude that it isn't worth living.

As you grow older this feeling is apt to harden about you, like a shell. You think you're growing wiser. You boast that you're becoming sophisticated . . . philosophical. But you're not. You're simply drying up!

Though you do not realize it, you're seeing life from as childish a viewpoint as you did at 17. You're still regarding it as a purely personal problem. And from that viewpoint life becomes an increasingly petty and pesty affair. The ignorance and curiosity which lent it such a lovely glamour at 17 have passed away. Now you see only the ugly "realities" . . . the harsh personal frustrations and disappointments. Weren't you a fool to think that living would be a great adventure!

NO, you weren't! Life IS a great adventure. It should, and might, go on being a greater and more glorious adventure to the end of our days. But we, ourselves, wreck the adventure.

We wreck it by limiting it.

The wonder and eagerness of life's dawning would return if we could look beyond ourselves and our own small experiences . . . try to see human experience as a whole . . . stretch our imaginations to include some vision of the vast plan of which our individual careers are a part . . . catch a glimpse however dim and fleeting, of that Source from which it all proceeds.

DOWD INDICTED IN BRIBERY OF 4 MORE

showed that a "John F. Dowd" had registered at two separate hostelries there during the past two months.

ACE SLEUTHS ON TRAIL

Deputy Police Supt. James A. Claffin and five detectives were assigned today to a 24-hour search for the missing official, who was reported on his way to California.

Police Supt. Edward W. Fallon notified Asst. Dist. Atty. Frederick H. Doyle that a special "Dowd bureau" had been chosen from among the department's best men. They are to conduct a ceaseless hunt until Dowd is found.

At the same time, it was learned that operatives from five insurance companies, which hold risks totalling $136,000 on the former sheriff's life, have joined the nation-wide hunt.

WITH HUSSEY SATURDAY

Insurance companies would give no reason for their anxiety, but it was reported they feared a repetition of the New York accident which sent Dowd to Bellevue Hospital with injuries.

Information that Dowd probably was heading for California was given to the district attorney's office by Charles A. Hussey, a political pal, who has pleaded guilty to soliciting bribes in the Dowd [illegible].

Hussey said he saw his former friend in Mattapan sq., Saturday night.

"I'm on my way to California," Dowd was reported as saying. "I will be away for a couple of months until this thing blows over. I'll see you then."

WATCH RACE TRACKS

Police were told that Dowd, an inveterate horse-race player, might be en route to try his luck at the Tanforan track in California.

Detectives also were reported on the watch at Bowie race track in Maryland and at the Fair Grounds in New Orleans, where racing opened today.

Meanwhile, the prosecution dug deep into Dowd's financial transactions, including plunges in the stock market and large wagers on [illegible].

As officers of a Boston brokerage house were called to the courthouse, it was alleged the former sheriff lost $24,000 on one stock deal alone. He was known as a heavy horse gambler, wagering as much as $200 a race, associates declared.

In addition to checking brokerage accounts, already bared, investigators continued searching for others.

NO CASH IN BOX

A deposit vault in a Roxbury bank, which was opened on order issued by Judge Frankland W. L. Miles, was found to contain papers but no cash.

According to the district attorney's office, there were two life insurance policies, one for $5000 and the other for $1000, which had been paid up since 1933 and 1934 respectively.

There were 10 shares of a building corporation stock valued at $10 a share, a valuable diamond stickpin, and 20 shares of a fraternal order first mortgage bonds worth $100 a share.

In addition, it was stated, there were 3 per cent adjusted U. S. government bonds maturing in 1945 valued at $372.50, and other papers of no value to the probe.

The records of the bank, according to the authorities, showed that Dowd's last visit to his safety deposit box was made on July 24, at which time he removed certain papers. This was the date John Patrick Connolly resigned under fire as clerk of Suffolk Superior Civil Court.

The automobile presented to Dowd at a victory banquet was located at the Milton garage of a relative and was found to be registered to another man.

With the search for Dowd being pressed, it was learned that one of the chief reasons for his failure to surrender is the difficulty the former sheriff is experiencing in obtaining counsel to replace Atty. Frank Juggins, who ceased to represent him after his resignation.

Believe Victim Slain by Gang

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 23 (AP)—George Schachter, 48, a clothing dealer, was shot to death in front of his home in what police said was apparently a gangland killing.

Two men in a black sedan without license plates drew up beside Schachter's automobile, late last night, and shot him three times in the mouth, cheek and throat.

"This case has all the evidence of a gangland killing," Detective Lieutenant Leroy Sanderson said.

Governor Has Box for Opera

Gov. and Mrs. Saltonstall and Mayor and Mrs. Tobin are among the box holders for the performance of "Aida," which opens the Boston season of the San Carlo Opera Co., tonight, under the sponsorship of the charity board and executive celebration committee of Massachusetts Grand Lodge, Order of Sons of Italy in America.

Other box holders listed are Marquis Carlo de Constantin, Italian consul-general; Mgr. Richard Haberlin, Joseph Gorassi, grand venerable; Judge and Mrs. Felix Forte, Stephen D. Bacigalupo, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Zottoli, Saverio Romano, Dominic De Stefano, Mrs. Joseph Tomasello, Peter Borre and Ubaldo Guidi.

The proceeds will be used to give additional assistance at Thanksgiving and Christmas to the large number of families already being aided by the grand lodge.

'Ice Pack Test' Costs Woman's Life

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 23 (AP) — Mrs. Rufus Nugent, 30, died in the refrigeration chamber at Queen of Angels Hospital here while undergoing a test to determine if her heart could withstand the five-day treatment recently developed by scientists in the fight against cancer.

Mrs. Nugent was one of the first patients on the Pacific Coast to undergo the ice pack technique, through which the body temperature is reduced more than eight degrees below normal.

New Safety Rails For Hub Bridges

New steel bumper rails, with tensile strength of 75,000 pounds to the square inch, are being installed on all Boston bridges to prevent skidding cars from plunging into railroad yards and into the water.

The safety measure was decided on after four persons were killed within a year, when their machines hurtled through city bridges.

RYAN GETS PROBATION FOR PARDON PERJURY

Former Rep. Francis E. Ryan of Somerville was placed on three-year probation today in Middlesex Court after he "told the truth" in connection with the pardon granted a state prison convict shortly before James M. Curley left the office of governor in 1936.

Ryan had been given until today by Judge Wilford D. Gray to purge himself of perjury charges following his testimony last June before the legislative commitee investigating pardons and paroles.

The case reached a climax yesterday when Atty. Daniel J. Gallagher told the court he had resigned as counsel for Ryan and the latter wanted time to get a new lawyer.

TELLS OF MONEY PAID

Ryan admitted the perjury Nov. 13, and at that time Dist. Atty. Robert F. Bradford said if he would "clear the matter up" he would recommend probation.

Last night Ryan met in a secret, five-hour conference with members of the legislative committee and the district attorney.

Francis G. Goodale, member of the committee, made the following statement:

"Ryan voluntarily appeared last night before the committee and has given further testimony in conection with the pardon of Frank W. Potter, state prison convict, and the money paid in conection therewith.

PLAN FURTHER EXPOSE

"He made his statements frankly, truthfully, and they will be of value in further prosecution of the invbstigation, and the committee so informed the district attorney. The next steps to be taken by this body will be considered at a meeting this afternoon."

It was believed Ryan had made a "clean breast" of the entire affair, even to the disposition of the $1300 check that was mentioned in the bill of particulars filed against him in connection with the Potter pardon.

Speculation ran rife through the courthouse after Judge Harold P. Williams had passed decision on Ryan as to who had been named in Ryan's lengthy conference.

Question Youth In 'Fiend' Murder

A South End youth was taken into custody by Back Bay police today for questioning concerning the "fiend" slaying of Mrs. Blanche Manderson, 60, of St. Botolph st.

Detectives picked him up during a search for several men who have been reported accosting women in the vicinity of West Newton st. and Columbus ave.

The youth was the fifth person to be questioned in the case. Another young man and his sweetheart were released last night. Although the crime is now three days old, detectives say they have gained enough information to expect a "break" within 24 hours.

Hub Milk Dealers In Congress Plea

An appeal by virtually all the small milk dealers serving the Greater Boston marketing area to skip Secretary of Agriculture Wallace of his powers to impose confiscatory regulations was on its way to Congress today.

The dealers agreed at a meeting at the University Club that such powers may lead to regimentation and requested Massachusetts senators and representatives to seek amendment of the AAA code.

War Family Mother Joins Anti-War Drive

A Rhode Island woman, prominent in civic affairs, who says she comes from a soldier family, enrolled today in the National Legion of Mothers, which seeks to keep the United States out of Europe's wars.

"I signed the pledge," writes Mrs. Mary A. Hitchen of 411 Webster ave., Arlington, R. I., "because I think there could be none better than a pledge from mothers, or prayers offered by them. I think it was the prayers of mothers that put an end to the World War.

"I have one son who was under the age limit when that war broke out. I have two sons-in-law and a brother who fought in the World War. I come from a war fighting blood. My uncle and my grandfather fought in the Civil War and I have a medal that my uncle received in the Crimea War.

WOULD SAVE BOYS

"I am former president of Sloum Corps, No. 6, of Providence Auxiliary of the G. A. R. I am at present chairman of child welfare work for this corps, so you see I don't want our boys to be used as gun fodder for other nations.

"We did not start this war and, with the help of our Creator, we do not want to end it, or enter it. We are a neutral country and let us keep it so."

Mrs. J. E. Holden, Sr., 45 Robert st., Attleboro, writes:

"Let Peace abide with us. Let us pray that this country doesn't become involved in war. Never! We want peace. I am the mother of seven sons and have a son-in-law whom I consider one of my own boys. One of my sons has been in the U. S. Navy 12 years. Five of my sons and my son-in-law are of war age. If the war lasted long enough they would also take the other two from me."

WAR BRIDE SPEAKS

Mrs. Harry Kray, 26 Fair st., Newburyport, writes:

"This pledge card is sent to show my hearty approval of your organization. I am the mother of three boys and one girl. Two of my boys are eligble for military service. My husband is a World War veteran. I was one of the first war brides and I know what suffering and anxiety is caused by war."

The slogans of the Legion of Mothers are:

1—To oppose the sending of American troops to fight on foreign soil.

2—To support a program of adequate national defense.

3—To combat all "isms" whose object is the destruction of the American form of government.

All women, married and unmarried, who are American citizens, are eligible. No dues are demanded. Please sign pledge cards and mail promptly to Box 228, Boston, Mass.

DON'T GIVE YOUR CHILD a "Bargain" Remedy You Don't Know All About

A child's life is beyond the price of pennies.

Have your physician "check up" your family frequently

Ask Your Doctor before giving your child any remedy you aren't sure of. No family need take this chance today.

Wait. Think first. Are you absolutely sure you should give a single dose of that drug to your child? Internally, remember. You don't know anything about it, do you? It was sold, you recall, as "something just as good" and it cost you, perhaps, a few pennies less.

A very dear purchase it could be! For your own peace of mind alone, give no home remedy you're not quite certain about without getting your own doctor's opinion. And never go against it.

Even in the case of the common children's remedy, milk of magnesia, ask your doctor what he approves. And when he says "Phillips' Milk of Magnesia", see that you get exactly that by asking expressly for "Phillips'" when you buy... never ask for just "milk of magnesia".

If your child prefers Phillips' in the newer form—tiny peppermint-flavored tablets scarcely larger than an aspirin tablet that children chew like candy, give it this way. For each tablet contains the equivalent of one teaspoonful of the liquid Phillips', and a big box costs only 25c at your drugstore.

Pima basket makers, Maricopa potters, Navajo weavers and Apache painters are due in town today from Arizona reservations to take up residence in the village for three days.

Robert Geronimo, son of the Apache outlaw, and Robert, Jr., grandson of the warrior, are scheduled to be honor guests at the movie village.

DAVIES TO SAIL DEC. 3

Executives of Jordan Marsh Company announced today that for the 11th consecutive year Santa Claus and Santason would be the guests of the Washington st. department store and that, as in the past, his visit toBoston will be featured by a parade in his honor.

As in the past, the parade will be held at 11 o'clock Thanksgiving Day morning, Nov. 30.

Meanwhile Santa will hold forth at Jordan's toy section on the fifth floor of the annex, located directly at the top of the new electric stairways.

MARKETS CLOSED

The country's principal security and commodity exchanges closed today, due to the observance of Thanksgiving in many states.

The New York stock and curb exchanges, banks and commodity futures markets closed. Outside of New York, the Boston Stock Exchange, grain markets in Chicago, Kansas City and St. Louis, the New Orleans cotton market shut down.

Canadian and foreign markets operated as usual.

Boston banks opened as usual today.

HUGH E.

BRADSHAW Investment Bankers Wake Up.

Financial Editor

Raucous depression day shouts of "What is the use of Investment Bankers" are still echoing in the cars of the financial fraternity . . . But this most pilloried of professions is waking up . . . A few of the more courageous are actually telling people something about their usefulness . . .

WHAT IS MORE . . . They are putting their story across . . . By talking plain language making sense to the laymen . . . Top effort along this line is that of Charlton MacVeagh, economist with Stock Exchange members Jackson & Curtis . . . He prepared a paper on the subject the firm wisely put into pamphlet form . . . Which James J. Minot, Jr., partner, sent along to us . . . Mr. MacVeagh does an excellent job of clearing up popular misconceptions regarding the business of underwriting and distributing securities . . . Few stones are left unturned . . . And none supposed to cover "faults" so dear to the whiplash tongues of critical orators . . .

INVESTMENT BANKERS . . . Are literally the conduits through which capital flows . . . But, Mr. MacVeagh points out, they can't create capital . . . That isn't their function . . . Trained experts in the mobilization of capital, their contributions in this field are duplicated by no other profession . . . Their outstanding characteristic is their backing of their judgment with their own reputations and capital . . . Continuance in business is all the proof needed of honesty and integrity . . . If we may put in our few cents worth, Investment Bankers are the fellows . . . that produce the capital . . . that management may produce the plant and equipment . . . that labor may produce the goods . . . And that's what U. S. prosperity is made of . . .

CURRENT TOPICS . . . Claiming State st. statistical attention to the exclusion of most everything else concerns earnings ratios . . . During periods of war similar to the present . . . With some observing that the market is inclined to sell on a very conservative times earnings ratio . . . In other words it takes into account the fleeting qualities of income borne of war . . . Which results in a hypothetical concern A selling at say $60 on per share net of $6 during war whereas it has been accustomed to attain the same price on peace time income of say $3 per share . . .

MARKET APOLOGISTS . . . Have been quick to seize on the above argument . . . First to explain current price lassitude . . . And second as an advance excuse for later rally failures . . . We disagree . . . Because domestic earnings are not war bloated affairs . . . Because earnings are deserving of more liberal discounting . . . Also if war does boost earnings from current levels prices should automatically rise to preserve current conservative valuations . . . Finally we dislike all times earnings rules . . . What really counts is the security earnings extend dividends through poor as well as good periods . . .

STOCK PRICES . . . From a trading standpoint have dropped back to levels where support should appear if the mildly bullish chart picture is to be preserved . . . Pre-holiday easiness was due more to an absence of buying incentives than to liquidation . . . Key groups while down were not weak . . . And in several directions bargain hunting scale down buying orders were uncovered . . . We favor adherence to a mildly constructive policy for the present . . . For until it is proven otherwise the market is in an uptrend that has simply been interrupted by a lengthy period of consolidation.

LAHR, HIT ON SHUBERT STAGE, TO STAR IN 'OZ' SEQUEL

Many Film Offers for Star Of 'Du Barry Was a Lady'

By PEGGY DOYLE

Lahr and laughter would seem to be synonymous. But it isn't so. Like most comedians—only more so—Bert Lahr, offstage, is a deadpan Pagliacci.

Right now he doesn't think he's too good in the Buddy DeSylva-Cole Porter hit comedy, "Du Barry Was a Lady," current at the Shubert. It is merely a sellout throughout Saturday night.

His washroom attendant turned Louis XV is being acclaimed as classic clowning, as is co-star Ethel Merman's Du Barry nee nightclub singer. But Lahr's leery

"Gotta do a lotta work on it," he mumbles, dolefully, with a Cowardly Lion shake of the head. "Needs work. You like it? (dubiously, although an instant before you've sworn you doted on it.) Think it'll go? Well, I dunno. I wonder."

Which is all according to Lahr, and a fairly exact indicator of the drift of the wind. If Lahr's doubtful, so the saying goes backstage—where we were getting this lugubrious load of stuff—the show's a smash hit.

All of which means that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will have to wait on its Cowardly Lion. Or haven't you heard the glad tidings that they are planning to star Lahr in a follow on "The Wizard of Oz," which made them plenty of plenza.

It is to be called "The Cowardly Lion of Oz," and we can hardly wait to see it. For Lahr's Cowardly Lion, who wept for his lost courage, ambled away with the acting honors in "The Wizard of Oz." There's been a Niagara of water under the bridge since Montgomery and Stone shot to theatrical glory in the original stage production of "The Wizard of Oz."

It is so long ago, in fact, that Bert Lahr was an unknown Dutch comedian on the burlesque circuit. So long ago that G-strings had a purely musical connotation and had as little to do with burlesque as the Cantors and the Jessels and the Tuckers had to do with it.

In those days before fame caught up with Bert Lahr, there were many humble chores he was forced to perform to earn his coffee-and. And so you can understand why he at first resisted the offer of Metro's Mervyn LeRoy to play the Cowardly Lion.

It was too much, complained the sad-eyed Lahr, reminiscently, like playing the rear end of a horse. Finally persuaded by LeRoy, Lahr lived to learn the true meaning of lionizing. Since his "Wizard of Oz" triumph, Hollywood, which had signally failed to utilize the great comedy talents of Lahr, is deluging him with screen offers.

But, for the nonce, the Cowardly Lion's dolorous gaze is directed towards Broadway where, on Monday night, in "Du Barry Was a Lady" he opens in what looks to be one of the season's most predictable successes

Vogel Is Loew's Director

Joseph R. Vogel's appointment to Loew's board of directors is cause for rejoicing among local officials and workers of the various theatercraft unions who have become his friends and partisans during 30 years in the Loew's service

Joseph R. Vogel

His career, which began at 14, is one of those fabulous success stories Alger might have dreamed up.

In order to pay his way through high school, 14-year-old Joe Vogel sought and secured the job of usher in a Loew's theater. At 19, he was that theater's manager.

Today at 44, he is one of the youngest directors on the Loew or any other board of any corporation directorate. He is in charge of all out-of-town theaters, directing the operation of Loew's State and Orpheum Theaters in Boston, with H. M. Addison as northeastern division manager, who also supervises other Loew theaters in Providence, Syracuse, Rochester, London and Ontario, Canada. Howard Burkhardt is local theater manager of the Orpheum and Fred Greenway of the State.

The still youthful Vogel has seen movies develop from "added features" to such super-s as "Gone With the Wind." This latter Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, incidentally, will begin its Loew's State and Orpheum engagement Thursday, Dec. 21.

Loew's new director, having held almost every job around a theater and knowing every detail of theater operation, is sympathetic with the problems of employes.

San Carlo Opera Stars Open Season Tonight With 'Aida'

Melody and melodrama invade Boston Opera House tonight when the San Carlo Opera Company inaugurates its annual Boston season with Verdi's "Aida."

Prefaced by two record-breaking seasons in New York and Chicago, totaling attendances approximating 92,000, Fortune Gallo's organization arrives today for an 11-day engagement with a notably big advance sale.

The repertory scheduled for the 14 operas that make up Boston's program is chosen from works that have definitely stamped themselves upon the consciousness of wide public appeal. The policy of "grand opera brought within pocket reach of the mass American public" will be ratified by a box-office scale ranging from 50 cents to two dollars.

Past performances, totalling 8500 before audiences approximating 16,000,000 and a box-office intake of more than $20,000,000, are proof enough of the success of the San Carlo Company's career of 30 annual transcontinental tours.

The Boston Opera House season, including tonight's "Aida," schedules nine evening performances, terminating Sunday afternoon, Dec. 3, plus two Saturday matinees, Nov. 25 and Dec. 2, two Sunday afternoon performances Nov. 26 and Dec. 3, and a children's matinee on Thanksgiving afternoon of "Hansel and Gretel," followed by ballet.

Carlo Peroni continues as the company's chief conductor throughout the engagement. Louis Raybout supervises the stage direction. The corps de ballet will again have those excellent solo dancers, Ludia Arnova, premiere danseuse, and Lucien Prideaux, premier danseur.

ANOTHER DAWN

A Complete Short Story Daily on This Page

By SHANE O'NEILL

THE young Englishman's dark, thoughtful face was sombre in the reflected glow of the embers, and he was silent for an appreciable time before he answered the girl's question.

"If there's a war," she had asked, her clear young face lighted with interest, "you'd have to go, wouldn't you?"

"One of a group of six couples she had climbed the mountain that day, and she was revelling in the peculiar atmosphere of security found only above timber line.

It is a security compounded of air so thin that it is an elixir, of a sense of complete removal from all the little things that seem important in the valleys.

The young Englishman removed his pipe before he spoke and then his voice was low and resonant.

"Yes," he said slowly, "I should go, of course. No fear of it though. It won't come to that, you know."

There was a silence in the big room in the lodge on top of the Eastern mountain.

All the year 'round, parties climb the 5200 feet, and the lodge is for those hardy souls who spend the night there to watch the sun come up over the sea of peaks.

Generally, those who sit around the fire are reposeful. They have conquered the long pull up the ridge through the Corridor, a slender swath of virgin spruce left, for some unknown reason, by the marauding lumbermen of an earlier day.

They have stumbled or swung, depending on their condition, up the rolling rocks in the dry water course called the "Agony." They have climbed, hand over hand, up the flinty face of the headwall, and they have toiled across the saddle, and up the last, steep rocky slopes.

Theirs is a feeling of accomplishment, topped by a full stomach, and the keen bite that is in that high air even in late August. Generally the conversation is light and full of plans for the next day's climb. But now the silence persisted, and became brooding in its intensity.

"YOU'D REALLY GO?"

A dusky-faced youth spoke up.

"You'd really go? That's ridiculous. Why should you go back at all? It's none of your quarrel."

There was a babble of talk then. Most of the young people were from Eastern universities. The rights and wrongs were thrown back and forth, the underlying causes thrashed out to the academic satisfaction of the group.

"You see," the clear-faced girl was insistent, "it's nothing to us, to you, if a crazy man starts burning down houses across the country. You can't stop him—he'll run down before he ever gets to your house."

Another voice broke in.

"Talk, talk. We all know it's nothing but a device to start a false boom. It's simply a final shot in the arm for the moulder g hulk of capitalism."

The young Englishman smiled wearily. He envied them, these keen, alert students. They were

The Principal Character In "Another Dawn"

JOHN CAMPBELL, an Englishman who enjoys the scaling of mountain peaks with American friends until he hears that Great Britain has entered the war. With Campbell there is but one alternative—and he accepts that alternative.

of a later generation. He was one of those who could well remember an elder brother's face—a face no more to be seen.

He could recall breathless days when each night that failed to bring news that the tide at last had been turned meant misery on the morrow. These things he could remember, and with them the look of many widows.

They were not memories that mixed well with abstract theories. Waiting for a pause in the discussion, he held up his hand.

"But it probably won't be, you know," he said. "There's such a thing as sanity left in the world." His voice rose, and shook a little. "It—it can't be. But if it does—well—"

He left the sentence unfinished, and his mind trailed back over the peaks he had climbed during the summer. Washington, Madison, Carter Dome—all of them, and now at last, Moosilauke. When men could do these things—what need for slaughter?

When the far distances through the sunset, or the glory of the world in the mountain mornings were there for men to see, what reason to pay a grisly cost to learn that blood and lust can solve no problems.

And the man—the man whose word could set the world aflame, or turn it once again to the happy uses of peace—he must know these things, because he was said to love the mountains. His place for meditation and great decisions was a retreat almost as high as this lodge.

But of all this he said nothing.

"We mustn't talk rot," he said, "there'll be no war. No one could stand it. No one could win."

A SPIRIT PARADE

He reached for his hat, and walked out for a final turn about the few score square yards that composed the peak.

It was a clear night, and there were only a few clouds, swiftly scudding before a northwest wind, to cloak the moon's brilliance. Behind him, he could hear the babble of voices again.

"What would you do, if we—" . . . "I certainly would not" . . . "The end of Western civilization" . . . "They haven't the money" . . . "I wouldn't miss it" . . .

At the last, John Campbell smiled. Money didn't matter, nor high-sound-slogans, nor fear, nor military knowledge. These words: "I wouldn't miss it," repeated over and over until they reached a mighty chorus of thousands upon thousands of youthful voices, were what made war possible.

Doubts, yes—the sinister designs of statesmen, too, age-old animosities; all of them had their bearing. But the burgeoning adventure spirit, the same urge that had sent men across uncharted seas, and to far, unknown mountain tops, the call that drowned all of the counsels of caution, and found an answer in the bounding blood of youth—without it there could be no war, for there would be none to fight it. He looked up at the darkened moon and started.

Crowds of hurrying people, bent in misery, were fleeing as though before a scourge across the face of the moon.

"God have mercy!" he exclaimed.

Standing at attention, so clearly defined that it was hard to believe his eyes, there was a soldier, silhouetted in the cloud's black outline.

Quickly it raced by, and was followed by another figure, a figure so familiar that at first he failed to recognize it.

It was like meeting an old friend unexpectedly and not knowing him for a moment. Before the wind tore it apart, he realized what this second cloud portrayed.

Proudly standing, cocked hat pulled down on his brow, and arm thrust into his military waistcoat, the Emperor Napoleon surveyed the world from the sky. And then there was a third figure, or group, not easily set into form. This, he could call imagination after the first two.

But as the thought crossed his mind, the group became clear, and he could see countless figures, each vaguely defined but accurate in the mass.

Crowds of hurrying people, bent in misery, were fleeing as though before a scourge across the face of the moon.

The young Englishman, John Campbell, felt suddenly cold, and he walked briskly back to the lodge.

The voices continued around the fire where he stood warming his hands for a moment, but Campbell heard nothing but a confused murmur. He went up stairs to the men's bunkroom then, and turned in.

"Queer duck," the dusky faced young man said, and then he picked up the thread of his argument. "Now as I said, they couldn't keep it up for more than a few weeks. The cost of——" His voice crackled on.

The morning was gray at first, and every one at the lodge was up for a pre-dawn breakfast. Steaming coffee, orange juice, flapjacks, and bacon.

They do very well for you, when it is considered that every pound of food and water there is packed up by manpower. College boys do it, with Indian packs, tumpline and all, carrying 70 pounds up the mountainside. There was a scuffling sound outside and the lodge dog, who had started up with a growl, whined eagerly and wagged his great tail.

"I guess it's Joe with the first load," the lodge master said. The door pushed open then, and the youth wearing nothing but shorts, woolen socks and climbing boots, strode in and slipped out of his pack, which he deposited carefully on the floor. Then he looked them all over, and his eyes were serious.

"Hello, everybody," he said. "I just got the news before I started up. The English are in it, and the French will be any minute."

There was a subdued murmur, at curious variance with the conversation around the fire the night before.

They shot questions at the packman, who gave what answers he could between gulps of hot coffee. The young Englishman stood aside silently.

Then, before taking his own pack, he slipped through the door and out upon the mountain.

In the East, the black peaks were cleanly cut against the orange sky and, as he watched, all the world beneath him sprang into life with the coming of the sun.

Blue wisps of smoke straggled from farmhouse chimneys far below and lost themselves in the pines of the lower slopes.

The faint gleam far beyond the mountains told him that he saw the ocean.

He stood there, trying to absorb it completely, trying to fix and crystallize permanently in his inner eye all the sunrises he had seen during the Summer.

Then he returned to the lodge, mounted his pack and waved to the silent group as he stood in the doorway.

"Good-by, all," he said. "Good to have seen you."

He swung away, then, and they watched him until he was nothing but a swinging speck on the saddle ridge. Quietly they gathered their belongings for the trip below, after they, too, had looked upon the dawn.

THE END.

Nancy's 'With Love' Has Harvard Man A-Flutter

Young Bob Davis of Harvard University who now admits he does all right—has a fine program planned for himself for tonight.

Bob, chairman of the Lowell House ball committee, persuaded Miss Nancy Bertelson, glamorous Boston post-debutante, now a New York model, to be Harvard's guest at the Harvard-Yale football game and dance Saturday.

He did that, he said, over her lengthy objections, by promising "armfuls of flowers, the most exciting week-end in the world" and that Miss B would be "Goddess of Victory" for Harvard.

Today he received a charming telegram from the young lady.

"Leaving New York 5:20 plane meet you East Boston airport," it said. "Love, Nancy."

"WOW!" exclaimed Mr. Davis in his palatial one-room suite in Lowell House when he read it. "WOW! Will I be there to meet her! Will I! With flowers in my arms. And then I'll drop the flowers and take Miss Bertelsen—"

You see the program he has planned for his evening.

"Suppose she only put 'love' in there for the tenth word?" the reporter asked him shrewdly.

Mr. Davis scowled.

"Belittler" he said.

Weed Renamed Council Head

Charles F. Weed, vice president of the First National Bank, was re-elected president of the New England council at its meeting today.

Secretary Frank A. Sullivan of Westerly, R. I., and executive vice president Dudley Harmon of Wellesley were also re-elected.

Charles S. Pierce of Milton, until recently vice president and general counsel of the New England Telephone Co. and now a director of that concern, was chosen treasurer.

He succeeds David H. Howie of Boston. Pierce recently resigned his place as counsel and vice president of the telephone company.

AUSTEN LAKE

Hail and Farewell as Harvard Torby Passes

I AM THINKING ABOUT HARVARD'S Torby Macdonald. So is Yale. But I am thinking about Torby because Saturday night his show will be over and there will be little use for his peculiar gifts.

Saturday at sundown, Torby will strip off his canvas knickers, unsling his leather shoulder harness and his papier-mache hip-plates and leave them in a sweaty puddle on the Dillon Field House floor. He will tip-toe over the dusty concrete floor and soap, rinse and towel himself in the shower room. The Harvard physician may paint his bruises with iodine or tape a sprain with medical plaster. Then he will dress and go into the autumn evening and past the silhouetted stadium steelwork—through with college football forever.

AUSTEN LAKE

At that instant, unaware to Torby Macdonald, a strange thing will happen. Instead of one person, whole and indivisible, he will become two people—(1) the real Torby Macdonald and (2) a Harvard legend. The real Torby will go into the night and join his friends, graduate next June and enter business, grow gradually gray, become fat or thin, accumulate worries, a success or a failure.

But the legendary Torby will remain behind to play folklore parts for incoming Harvard generations and haunt the graduate I-remember gatherings. Unlike the real Torby, the lengendary Torby will never grow a day older in the memory of his mates but will stay in their minds as a tawney-haired, slender youth with a firm chin and a squinty eye who had a rare knack for slipping a tackler or heaving touchdown passes.

For memory never grows up with the swift roll of the years. It remains forever green and 20 years hence when the present Harvard Hordes have grown gizzled and gouty they will recall their old hero in the terms of today's boyhood—still young, bubbling and dynamic as he romped through the college season.

Still the Autumn's Social Event

THE HARVARD-YALE GAME HAS LOST much of its raw-masculine "ugh" since the years when it consisted of 22 intertwined Swobodas, Sandows and Atlases, hand culled for their muscular lumps and capacity for puff. The H-Y game has dwindled from the Nation's best since the little cow-hired colleges began coaxing the burliest and biggest school kids with pin-money, free board and a haberdashery account. Yet the H-Y game is still the standard blue-book event of our autumn calendar.

Why do the papers give away a million dollars worth of advertising—pure reading matter and pictorial display about clean, lean youth; kids sublimely innocent of the trials of life; kids with adolescent delusions. A sublimely innocent manufacturer with something to sell couldn't afford the cost of such space. Yet Harvard and Yale get it for nothing.

Why? Nobody's reputation is at stake in the big dimple Saturday. The game, if viewed from its historic significance is being played for the Senior year book. A year hence it will be forgotten by Saturday's 50,000 who convulse on the big levels and by the millions who read how it happened. Quick now what was the score of the 1938 H-Y game?

So why? Because the Harvard-Yale game is not merely a football contest, measured in terms of tackle dives and fingernail snatches. It is a pageant of 58 years, sentimental milestones which go echoing down the ages to become something glorious in a life of thwart, worry and exasperation, so that the old codgers with their mutton chop whiskers who played in the old stockingcap day come barking back cross-country to touch finger tips with their vanished youth. Their sons and daughters come, too, whooping in victory or standing and moaning in defeat.

THIS IS TRADITION

If the same Harvard and Yale players were togged in different colors and playing for the Idlehour A. C. and the Wildcat Pleasure Club, I doubt that more than a sideline fringe of the neighborhood unemployed and a firehouse delegation would bother to watch. The game would be the same with the lads heaving and tugging just as hard.

But this is tradition! Tradition with the savor of half a century. There is an ivy-shawled background, generations of football females on the arms of coonskin escorts, hucksters hawking pastboard footballs and red and blue feathers,

CRIMSON BACKS PICKED; ELI EXPECTS UPSET WIN

By DAVE GLUECK

The last hard scrimmage for the Harvard squad was to be held at the Stadium this afternoon after which the boys move out to Middlesex School for their annual banquet and spend the remainder of their time in light workouts in preparation for the invasion of Yale.

The murky weather of yesterday forced the majority of the players into the Briggs Cage where a three-hour session was held. Only the centers and a few of the backfield players took advantage of the mud in the event that heavy footing is encountered Saturday.

Harlow has driven his team hard all week for the game and word comes from the rival camp that the Bulldogs are ready to upset the Crimson, who probably will be a slight favorite.

The question of the Harvard starting backfield seems about set. Harlow, for the first time since he came to Cambridge, has a good supply of top flight backs.

COLEMAN TO START

Bill Coleman is a cinch to be in the starting blocking back berth and Capt. Torby Macdonald will be in the tail back position as the Cantabs answer the opening whistle.

Charley Spreyer, the 183 soph ace who put on a one-man show against the Cadets, has been playing on team B all week and it looks as though he would be used as a relief man for the Haivard leader.

Macdonald, although he is in reported top shape, is hardly in condition to go the full route.

The battle for the right-half position or the wing back as it is called in the Harlow system has been a tossup all season between the veteran Joe Gardella and sophomore Frannie Lee.

Gardella started the Yale game last year in the bucking position, but this fall Dick Harlow moved him to the wing back position.

Lee, 178 soph from New Haven, has proved to be something of a surprise. Lee is one of the fastest men on the team and once he has passed the line of scrimmage, it is just good night. Lee has reached paydirt against Princeton, Army, and he set up the Harvard tally against the Quakers.

HEIDEN POWERFUL

The final position in the starting backfield quartet will probably be filled by Hurrican Heiden, another soph. Heiden is a great defensive player and can crack a line with tremendous power.

Heiden, who hails from Milwaukee, spent last summer tossing beer barrels around, and his great strength makes him an invaluable asset in the Crimson plans to put the Bulldogs in the dog house for the third year in a row.

Al Kervokian, great Harvard tackle a few years ago, was watching the Crimson go through their paces. After watching the midwest "Hurricane" hit the line, Al said:

"He is the hardest driving runner that I have ever seen at Harvard."

FRAN LEE

Yale Band Stag

Conservative Harvard elements, still aghast at the inundation of feminine cheer leaders and drum majors at the New Hampshire game, breathed easier today upon receipt of a pledge from New Haven that Yale would positively not enter the stadium Saturday with a lady baton twirler leading the band.

Thoroughly male Edward A. Flickner of Dormont, Pa., will lead the band, according to the Yale communique and will wear trousers.

Yale Confident On Eve of Trip To Harvard

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 23—Amazingly pepped up and confident after an impressive offensive drill, Yale gridmen were due to go through a pass drill this afternoon before packing for the trip to Harvard.

Despite their unimpressive play at times during the season the Eli coaching staff and the players themselves are absolutely confident that they have a better than a mere chance to upset the favored Harvard eleven on Saurday in the Stadium.

The greatest worry to the Yale coaches earlier in the season was Capt. Torby Macdonald of Harvard, but after a season in which he has played only a few minutes, he's no longer a major headache.

Exams Hamper Green Workout

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 23 (AP)—The Dartmouth football squad resumed practice for the first time since the Cornell debacle but examinations kept the squad down to a bare handful of players.

With such key men as Bill Hutchinson, George Sommers, Bob Lempke, Don Norton, Bob Nissen and Ray Hall absent because of class room engagements, Coach Earl Blaik was forced to limit the first workout of the week to limbering up exercises and signal drills.

Among the other idle players were the injured Jack Guenther, left guard, and Bob Krieger, left end. Both, however, were expected to be available next week when the Indians complete their season against Stanford in New York.

Kansas Kicking Ace Is Threat to Eagles In Fenway Collision

The Wildcats of Kansas State University, 29 strong, were pounding over the rails today headed for Boston and a game of football with the Boston College Eagles at Fenway Park Saturday afternoon.

Tomorrow the K-Staters will work out in Albany, N. Y., before arriving in Boston.

With the exception of Elmer Hackney, shot putter and All-American fullback and Ken Hamlin, a substitute center, both of whom are indisposed the Kansans are in top shape and ready to put up a terrific scrap in their last game this season.

KANSAS FEARS EAGLES

According to Joe Newman, publicity director of the western organization, K-State regards Boston College as one of the top teams in the east. Newman arrived in town two days ago. The westerners feel that a victory over the Leahy coached team will go a long way to make up for some drab performances they have put on this year.

Last week's unexpected 10-0 loss to Iowa State, a team which previously had won but a single game, was the climax in the "drab" department, and K-State hopes to redeem itself in the grid world by an outstanding showing in Boston.

If the contest eventually evolves into a close ball game, one in which a place kick or field goal can decide the issue, Saturday's visitors will have no fear of the outcome.

Halfback Jim Brock, a corking blocking back and a boy who launched his varsity college career against the same Eagles two years ago at Alumni Field, is an ace place kicker.

SURE POINT KICKER

In nine attempts thus far this season Brock has not missed once when trying for the important "point after" and one of the two field goals he has booted this fall came close to giving the Wildcats a victory over Tom Stidham's powerful Oklahoma eleven.

The Cowboys won the game 13-10 via a late game touchdown after K-State had led most of the way.

Boston College had another stiff workout, most of which was devoted to scrimmage on a snow covered field. Some passing plays were used but for the most part the team worked on the ground. Though the field was slushy and soft the backs weren't troubled by the slippery going as much as they expected to be. Of the lot, sophomore Frank Maznicki, who has been making a habit of running wild in practice, was again the most effective.

10,000 Grid Seats Offered Public For H. C.-B. C. Game

There are still more than 10,000 seats, priced at $3.30, available for the Boston College-Holy Cross football classic a week from Saturday at Fenway Park, it was announced today by B. C. A. A. officials, anxious to curb the impression that the game is already a sell-out.

These seats are on sale at Boston sporting goods stores, Filene's, Fenway Park and at the B. C. A. A. offices in Newton, open from 9 a. m. to 7 p. m.

Kerr Assured Of Colgate Berth

HAMILTON, N. Y., Nov. 23 (AP)—Andy Kerr will remain as head football coach at Colgate. He will be raised in rank to faculty status and he is quite likely to end his active career as tutor of the Red Raiders, it was announced here by William A. Reid, director of Athletics.

In a statement, Reid said:

"When Andrew Kerr came to Colgate in 1929, officials of the institution firmly believed that he not only possessed the qualities essential to lead young men but that he would also get the most out of the material at hand. Throughout his 11 years as head football coach, nothing has happened to alter this opinion."

Reid stated that Kerr's present contract ends next spring but that, after meeting with the athletic council, it was agreed that Kerr will have faculty status, the same as the director of athletics, and that he will go along on a year to year basis, the same as other faculty members. Kerr said he would prefer this arrangement.

Although Colgate football teams have not won as consistently as they did in the early years of Kerr's regime, it has been admitted that the material has not been as good as it was some years ago. However, Kerr's record at Colgate shows teams turned out by him have won 67 games, lost 26 and tied one.

Westy Downs Managoff

A dislocated shoulder sustained with the third and final fall but little more than two minutes old gave Marvin Westenberg the edge over Bob Managoff in the feature bout of Paul Bowser's wrestling show at the Boston Arena last night.

Westenberg took the first fall after 21m. 10s., with a leg lock, but Managoff came back to take the second fall after 11m. 8s., with a drop kick and body press.

Other results: Jim Sarris and Luigi Bacigalupi, 20m. draw; Gene Bowman beat Tony Jordan, 11m. 57s.; Bull Martin beat Everett Kibbons, 10m. 7s.; Leo Numa beat Joe Marah, 20m. 41s.

Extend Contract Of Anderson

IOWA CITY, Ia., Nov. 23 (INS)—Dr. Eddie Anderson, the miracle worker who brought the Iowa football team out of the slough of despond to win all but one of its games this season, was offered a new six-year coaching contract.

This may be the compromise upon which those Iowans who were set to run Anderson for president may be persuaded to agree. Nile Kinnick, the Hawkeye's plunging, passing halfback, was to have had the second place on the ticket.

It looked as if nothing much more could be asked of the team after it had defeated Notre Dame two Saturdays ago, but the amazing Hawks came back last Saturday to whip the powerful Minnesota Gophers. Now, Coach Anderson and the team can have about anything they want.

In fact, according to announcement, the coaching contract was said to be on Anderson's terms.

IRISH-TROJAN CLASH TOPS THRILLING CARD

By LAWTON CARTER
International News Service Sports Editor

Held to close scores by all opponents and beaten by Iowa, the Irish of Notre Dame probably will get their toughest football game of the season Saturday when they attempt to stop the rush of Southern California's Trojans, who have gone on a rampage since being tied by Oregon in their opening game.

In any case, the battle of South Bend is the standout of a day on which other spectacles of national import will bring together unbeaten Cornell and Penn's tough team, and Michigan's super-stellar backfield aginst Ohio State, which can and may clinch the Big Ten title.

The battle of South Bend should be the kind the customers dream about, but seldom see. Not that the Irish have picked on any setups in beating Purdue, Georgia Tech, Southern Methodist, Navy, Carnegie Tech, Army and Northwestern, while dropping only the Iowa contest by a single point.

Each of the encounters was terrific.

TROJANS RUGGED

However, the Irish may be meeting the toughest club on their schedule this time. The Trojans have been scored on only twice while running up 138 points and generally are picked to win the coast conference championship and provide the West's half of the competition in the Rose Bowl tussle New Year's Day.

It might be mentioned that the Trojans will get a thorough test, too. They have never met a club like the Notre Dames, who will trot out backs and linemen in carload lots—and keep pouring them in there.

Cornell may be the best team in the nation—and will get an excellent chance to prove it against Penn, which has been good and bad by turis in winning four out of seven, but undoubtedly will be good Saturday.

TEST FOR MICHIGAN

It generally is for this annual renewal of one of those rivalries that goes back into the dark ages. As a matter of fact, Penn was good last week in losing by two points to Michigan's great eleven.

And Michigan will get another good bouncing around on Saturday, win or lose. Beaten in the surprise of the year by Illinois, then by Minnesota, Michigan showed its comeback powers against Penn last week by way of getting set for an Ohio State team that has lost only to Cornell and needs only this Saturday's game to win the Big Ten crown.

Brighton Winds Up Season

By MICHAEL GILLOOLY

There'll be a horde of ambitious youngsters from Brighton High School overflowing with confidence, invading National League field tomorrow afternoon to wind up its schedule against a downtrodden Roslindale club in one of the newest Boston football rivalries.

With its record already sewed up, Brighton will be seeking a passing attack on the local front that will spell its most successful season since Joe McKenney was a lad—not hoping to equal the physical talent for those passing years.

But it's been a long time since an Orange and Black eleven has gone through a campaign without a defeat and this second club sent to the field each fall by Coach Billy Murphy appears to have that drive and spirit to turn the trick.

Brighton has won four decisions, split two while registering 70 points against zero for the enemy.

LOST TO WATERTOWN

The opener was a 12-6 setback by Watertown, but Coach Murphy will tell you that his boys should have won that one, too. Only a couple of bad breaks robbed the team of an otherwise unbeaten slate.

Brighton's latest feat was the tilting of South Boston, annual district ruler, in one of the upsets of the Hive. This victory has installed Murphy's squad a huge favorite to dump Roslindale which has enjoyed little success this year.

"There's no stopping these boys this year so far as football goes, for every one of them loves to play," said Murphy.

"They want to scrimmage all the time, they love contact work and have shown this enthusiasm all season. We're at the top because everybody on the squad cooperates.

"We're not taking that Roslindale team too lightly out here in spite of the fact that we might have reason to do so. They lost to Hyde Park by three touchdowns while we beat the Parkers by the same margin. But in schoolboy ranks, anything can happen so we'll work as hard for this game as for any other.

NO INDIVIDUAL STARS

"There's no individual star on the team, but a lot of credit must go to Capt. Paul McGrath, the weasel who just bores into opposing backfields. He's so small that he's usually overlooked until he makes a pest of himself, and then the rivals begin to concentrate on him.

"But he's not the only boy on the team. We have 10 more in that starting lineup who are daddies, and great boys to work with. I'm hoping for them that we beat Roslindale."

Those successful in winning honors in the inter-city show Dec. 18 will make the trip to the West Coast where the eyes of the amateur world will be focused on those winning honors.

On Monday night, the third in a series of four Arena eliminations will be held with the winners of the four jousts meeting in the finals Monday, Dec. 11, at the Boston Garden.

The All-America tryout series of 1939 will go down on the books as one of the most thrilling ever conducted in Boston. More action has been crowded into the first two meetings, and a greater number of knockouts recorded than has ever been witnessed in a Boston tournament in years.

Fight fans always want action, and the type of amateurs battling for honors in this tournament have not disappointed their following.

The boys who have already qualified have served notice on the rest of the amateurs throughout the nation that New England must be recognized when it comes to snaring National All-America honors.

Entries continue to pile up for the coming show. Recent mail brought in the blanks of George Dresser, South Boston, and Frank Collins of Somerville in the 126 open; Eugene Bolden, Providence, and Ruby Margolin, Dorchester, in the 147 open, and John Lycurgus, Boston, and Paul Conley, South Boston, in the 160.

May Send Stanowski To Providence Reds

TORONTO, Nov. 23 (AP)—Manager Conny Smythe of the Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League announced that Walter Stanowski, rookie defenseman, will be loaned to a minor league team when his injured ankle heals, to allow him to get back into condition.

Smythe said Stanowski, who played with Syracuse of the International-American League last season, is expected back on skates at the end of this week. He then will be sent to Providence, Pittsburgh or some other International-American League club for a couple of weeks.

BROWN VARSITY STRONG

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 23 (AP)—Drill against Rutgers plays featured the Brown practice as the coaches prepared their charges for the a week from today last game on the Brown schedule.

The freshman squad presented the Rutgers plays and the varsity showed strength in breaking them up.

Later the varsity scrimmaged against the freshmen with the varsity scoring two touchdowns. Detwiler scored on a long run and Donovan, a substitute end, caught a pass for the other touchdown.

Brown Barrier to Rutgers Perfect Season

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Nov. 22 (AP)—With a 13-game winning streak behind him and what may be the hardest test of the season coming up, Coach Harvey Harman put his Rutgers football eleven through stiff drilling this week for the Brown game on the 30th.

If the Scarlet can get by the Bruin in Providence next week it will be the first team in Rutger's 70-year-history to chalk up an undefeated season. One tie is on the record.

Harman planned to overhaul the entire offense and defense in the week and one-half at his disposal. He spent yesterday on fundamentals and new plays designed for the Borwn defense and today pitter his varsity against a Brown offense portrayed by the freshman team.

Lake Says:

the electric undercurrent of expectation, the deep-throated howls in unison, the inevitable inebriates, bands, marching, flags flying.

So the H-Y crowd comes as much to see the rest of the crowd and break the November chill with a peck, gulp and gurgle as they do to see 22 lean and splendid specimens shove each other around. The athletes in their crimson and cobalt jerseys may be named Macdonald, Gardella, Healy, Burr, Seymour and Stack, but the old jossers see them with their clock turned back as the Shevlins, and Coys and Verweibes and Mahans of yesteryear.

So let the current Yale and Harvard horde look long and lovingly on Saturday's scene, so that they may recapture the memory in later years when, in their turn, they come back with twinges of their own and look down on the athletes of that future day and re-vision them as the Macdonalds, Gardellas, Seymours and Stacks of their youth. In their turn, too, they will paint the old scene to fit their fancy, forgetting what envious impatience troubled their youth.

Harvard and Yale games are played less for the moment than for memory, which is why I am thinking of Torby Macdonald, whose show will be over Saturday night and with little left of his peculiar gifts but as a means of a pleasant dream.

INDOOR PRO NINE NEAR REVAMPING

With several new players, including "Red" Daughters, the former Holy Cross star, working out Manager Freddie Maguire and Coach Joe Dugan of the Boton club of the new National Professional Indoor Baseball Lague are ready for a drastic shakeup.

All the signs along the trail are that McGuire will throw a much different battle front on to the skirmishing lines when Boston meets Brooklyn in the Boston Garden opening, next Monday night, than the one that was bowled over in the road opener in Philadelphia.

Maguire last night acknowledged he was contemplating "one or two" changes but would not commit himself further than to say much would depend on what brand of ball the Bostonians delivered in the games in New York and Brooklyn this week-end.

"One swallow doesn't make a season," says Freddie, "and the loss of one or two games at the start of the race doesn't mean a club is going to be a tail-ender. I know I will have to make one or two changes before Monday's game here. Whether I will have to make more remains to be seen."

Jumbos Drill On Air Attack

Pushing his Tufts squad to their limit, Coach Lew Manly is stressing forward passing this week, as this is the department which is expected to make any headway against the heavier Mass. State players on Saturday.

Closing their season with their ancient rivals, the Jumbos hope for a victory, which will help them forget their four losses to two wins for a season record.

Indications point to Capt. Art Griffin and Murray Kenny doing most of the ball-throwing, while Sophomores Art Harrison and Bob Rutter are expected to alternate with them in the hope of keeping a fresh backfield throughout the game.

Unbeaten St. Brigid's Plays Gate of Heaven

St. Brigid's CYO football team of South Boston, undefeated in eight games this season, will play the Gate of Heaven Club, also of South Boston, on next Sunday, Nov. 26, at Aquarium Field in South Boston.

This game will settle the championship of South Boston.

St. Brigid's will enter the fray a favorite, because of its victories against Scarlet and White of Dorchester, St. Mary's of Charlestown, St. John's of Roxbury.

Stiff Drill Set For Army Squad

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 23 (AP)—Army's drive to prepare its football team for the Navy game next week continues this afternoon with a hard scrimmage on the docket.

The varsity worked on both its offense and defense, the blue clad jayvees using Navy formations during the contact work. Army's offensive drill was confined largely to plays that have been designed especially for Navy.

Worcester to Start For Cornell Saturday

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 23 (AP)—The final floodlight practice of the year, a practice in which Right Tackle Nick Drahos did not participate, Cornell's mentor, Carl Snavely, announced that Bill Worcester would start at the position against Pennsylvania Saturday.

Snavely announced that Drahos undoubtedly would be in uniform and ready to play but that Worcester, because of his fine play in the last two games, would get the starting nod.

Pick Syracuse Over Maryland

COLLEGE PARK, Md., Nov. 23 (AP)—Syracuse University will wind up its Golden Jubilee football season today, heavily favored to defeat the University of Maryland in a turkey day game.

A victory for Syracuse, fresh from a surprising 7 to 0 decision over Colgate, would even its seven-game series with Maryland. The Terps have won three games to two for Syracuse. One was a tie.

Coach Frank Dobson planned to use eight seniors in his starting lineup against the Orangemen.

TEAM WINS FOR STAR'S DYING DAD

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 23 (AP)—The story of how Creighton University won its homecoming football game for a sick man was told today.

It was late in the fourth quarter and Loyola of New Orleans was leading, 7 to 13, when game Capt. George Lynch, whose father was seriously ill, led his team into a huddle.

Guard Tony Cemore looked at George, then spoke:

"Let's get going! Let's get this game for George's father!"

The final was Creighton 21, Loyola 13, and that night Atty. W. P. Lynch got the game ball from his son. Atty. Lynch died last Wednesday.

TOW ROPE, WAXWING IN 'ORLEANS' FEATURE

FAIR GROUNDS, New Orleans, La., Nov. 23—The Thanksgiving Handicap will feature the opening of the race meeting here this afternoon. There will be a classy field in this event open to horses of all ages which will be run over a distance of one mile and a sixteenth.

Two Rope and Waxwing, who ran good races at New England tracks during the season that closed last Saturday, will be among the starters. Tow Rope has displayed amazing speed in the early stages of races, but has tired a bit in the closing drive.

Waxwing also gets away fast, and when fit, is also a good finisher.

Other expected starters are O'Bantam, Jumping Jill, Supreme Sir, who will run as an entry with Zevson under the colors of E. L. Martin, Merry Mood, Kenyon C., Sir Mowlee, Gray Jack, who is coupled with Chance Ray, and Phipowill.

For the first time in years, the 500 handbook shops operating will continue business as usual today.

Police raids and destruction of furniture have been the penalties in recent years for handbook shops operating during the race meet. But "the word" is said to have gone down the line that nothing will be done this season to close the establishments.

A standing order from Police Superintendent George Rever to close all handbooks found operating is in effect.

Harlem Yankees Open at Garden

Big time basketball in Bston, which made its debut in the Garden last year, will be inaugurated Friday night, Dec. 8.

The famous Harlem Yankees, who thrilled the crowd with the two outstanding games of the three twin-bills staged in the Garden last year, have been scheduled to meet the Garden team on the opening night. In the other half of the twin-bill, two of the championship teams from last year's Boston Park Dept. League, will face each other.

The Garden team has been strengthened this year by the addition of Lou Athanas, leading college scorer in the country when he captained Lowell Textile.

Another outstanding star who will be making his debut is Al Mungall, 6 ft. 7 in. center from Yale, and one of the best college players ever seen in this section. Principal interest centers in the debut of Jimmy Hegan, the young Lynn English star of two years ago, who had every major league team bidding for him before Cleveland finally obtained his services.

Hegan gave the greatest exhibition ever seen at the Boston Y. M. H. A. a year ago when he personally conducted the Malden City Club to a thrilling victory over Sam Smith's aggregation.

With Athanas, Mungall and Hegan combining with the inimitable Sol Nechtem, former Boston University and Chelsea High captain, the new Garden team looks even more powerful than the group that won three straight last year.

The Boston Mutual Insurance will meet the Boston Consolidated Gas quintet in a supporting game.

Bill Farnsworth Should Repeat

By DAVE WILSON

BEST BET—BILL FARNSWORTH, FOURTH RACE

BOWIE RACE TRACK, Nov. 23—It took Bill Farnsworth a long time to reach top form but his recent victory over Black Bun and Great Union says he's fit and ready to run for a king's ransom.

The speedy son of Crack Brigade is scheduled to have the capable Don Meade in the pilot's seat and this pair appear to form an almost unbeatable combination in the fourth event here this afternoon.

Mr. Boston

By JACK CONWAY

THE STATEMENT BY the Harvard Athletic Association that novocain was injected into Torby Macdonald's injured ankle so that he could play in the Penn game is additional proof that college football calls upon medical science in an effort to make it possible for its star players to participate in major contests.

It has been a practice with the leading colleges to do everything possible to place their better football players on the field in key games. It was done long before novocain and other drugs became a part of the football equipment.

When I was first writing sports, there was a case of a famous college back who had his shoulder bone scraped by a surgeon's knife a few days before the final game of the season. Protected by bandages and pads, the injured player, who was a line plunger, did his usual duties for dear old alma mater. The famous surgeon who performed the last minute operation told me that a bone pain is always severe, and he characterized the player who went under the knife as one of the most courageous persons to ever play football.

The young athletes as a rule are willing to submit to any treatment that will enable them to get into the lineup. They have an exaggerated idea of the importance of helping to gain a victory. Later when they have been disillusioned by the passing years they realize that the wisest thing they could have done when at college was to have protected their bodies against unnecessary injury.

Drugs Commonly Used in All Sports

AT THE RACE track where people wager money legally through mutuel machines on the performances of thoroughbreds, Racing Commissions make it their duty to see that no drugs are used on the horses. When a race has been run, a doctor takes the winning horse and any other thoroughbred who may have acted peculiarly and has saliva tests taken. If a horse has been stimulated even by a harmless drug, the trainer is suspended and the horses in his barns are not permitted to run until they get a trainer who is in good standing.

Athletes do not get the protection that is given to race horses.

There have been numerous cases where the use of various kinds of drugs have enabled a young football player, baseball star, boxer, golfer or tennis player to go forth to competition before cheering thousands.

For years boxers with bad hands have had their hands "shot" with novocain or some other drug about 20 minutes before they entered the ring.

Between rounds various solutions containing drugs have been used to stimulate boxers. There was the former world's champion who on the instructions of a second was given a mixture of strychnine and spirits of ammonia after a stormy round. The boxer did not know what he had been given, but in a subsequent bout asked that the same stimulant be used if necessary.

"I found out about the solution while watching a six-day bike race," the second later revealed. "I couldn't understand what enabled the riders to keep going round and round without sleep. I slipped into the dressing room, and asked one of the old-time riders for his secret. He pointed to a bottle which he told me contained a solution of strychnine and spirits of ammonia.

"I tried the solution on myself on the sixteenth hole of a golf match, and breezed the remainder of the distance. That is how I began to use it in the boxing game."

Novocain Almost Cost Wrestler Bout

THERE WAS the case at the old Grand Opera House on Washington st. where two wrestlers were battling in a grudge bout for a $5000 side bet. One of the wrestlers reported with an injured arm, and his backers were so confident in his ability that they wished the match to go through. It was decided to shoot the injured arm with novocain. A doctor administered the treatment shortly before the match started.

The wrestler used his injured arm to seize one of his opponent's legs, and then applied pressure. This action caused the novocain to move to the stomach, and the wrestler almost fainted. He was obliged to surrender his hold. He stalled along for 20 minutes, and then regained his strength sufficiently to win. The men who had backed him for $5000 trembled in the wings of the stage as they watched their champion almost collapse.

A New England schoolboy football team was once stimulated with strychnine in the second half of a game. The matter was made public, and brought forth a storm of protest.

Brandy Commonly Used by Veteran Stars

VETERAN ATHLETES in many lines of sports often take brandy in the latter part of a severe athletic test. It gives them the little lift they need to carry them to victory. Trainers will tell you that brandy properly administered is not harmful to an athlete.

There was an old-time boxer who always had two or three quarts of champagne in his corner. He would start taking the champagne at the end of the third round, and usually drank a victory toast when the contest was over.

When Jack Sharkey was boxing, water was the strongest stimulant he ever took. Sharkey was bitterly opposed to boxers using drugs or stimulants of any kind. He argued that when an athlete needed a lift from some form of stimulant to keep himself going, it was time for him to put on the carpet slippers and call it a day.

It is agreed by all persons close to sports that medicines of any nature should only be given to an athlete under the direction of a competent doctor. Otherwise the effects may prove harmful.

Terrier Frosh Had Poor Year

Boston University's freshman football team has just completed a season that has made Pat Hanley, major domo of the varsity far from happy.

His yearlings not only dropped five games without a victory but only scored six points against 130 and that total in points against could have been much larger than that.

The Boston College freshman score was 27 to 0 and it could easily have been double that. After the Eagiets scored four times, they kicked on first or second down no matter where they were to keep the score where it was.

In fact, one football authority at that game ventured an opinion that the Terrier yearlings made up on of the worst freshman football teams he had ever seen.

From their showing this fall, there is not a man on the squad who figures to step into a varsity job next fall and there aren't more than three or four of them who will even make the squad.

Under ordinary circumstances this would mean nothing but grief for the Terriers next fall but fortunately the varsity is made up almost entirely of sophomores and juniors. For that reason there will be no pressing need for new blood next fall.

As a matter of fact there will be only three seniors who take the trip to Tampa for the season wind-up a week from Friday night. They are Captain Paul Sullivan, Joe Giannotti and Ray Needham.

And Coach Pat Hanley has three outstanding sophomores to replace them. Sid Michaels, former All-Scholastic center at Roxbury Memorial who played 60 minutes against Cincinnati and 56 minutes in the Boston College game, should fill in nicely for Ray Needham at center.
